TRUMAN KILLS BILL FOR STATE JOB CONTROL

Vetoes 52 Billion Spending Cut

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 23—President Truman today vetoed the 52 billion dollar appropriation reduction bill because it contained a provision returning the United States employment service to the separate states within 100 days.

In a memorandum of disapproval, the President said he was in thoro agreement with the action of congress cutting billions from 1946 government appropriations voted before the war ended, but could not approve the employment service provision because "such a dispersion and transfer [among the individual states] at this time would immeasurably retard our reëmployment program."

The President repeated his recommendation that the transfer of the employment service to the states be postponed until June, 1947. He declared that the administration is committed to returning the service to state jurisdiction and promised that the transfer will be carried out eventually.

Message Rebukes Congress

Mr. Truman said that if the economy provisions of the bill stood alone he would "gladly" sign the measure into law.

The memorandum rebuked congress for attaching the legislative employment service rider to an appropriation bill "contrary to good government." Mr. Truman asserted he objected strongly to the early return of the federal employment service to the states but "even more strongly' to the method in which the bill was enacted by the house and the senate.

Expressing regret that he could not approve the portions of the bill rescinding appropriations, the President praised congress for its "fine spirit of economy."

Mr. Truman declared that "far from wishing to sacrifice" the government appropriation economies contained in the bill, he will preserve the reductions. He said he has asked the budget director to place the amounts which congress trimmed from the appropriations in a reserve status.

Terms Time Inopportune

Presenting his reasons for vetoing the bill, Mr. Truman said that the measure requires that the unified national system of employment offices be broken up and returned to the authority of the separate states within 100 days.

Such a transfer should be made at the "proper" time, he continued, but the bill requires that the shift be made "at the wrong time and in the wrong way." He criticized the bill's provisions dealing with federal-state coöperation in employment service as "unsound and unwise."

"So far as the timing of the transfer is concerned," the President continued, "the period designated by this bill—the next 100 days—is the most disadvantageous that could have been chosen.

Program Called Harmful

"Our local public employment offices are now and will be during the next several months in the midst of the peak work load in their history. At such a time, any change in management and direction is necessarily disruptive to the service. A change which would replace our present single and unified system by . . . separate managements would be very harmful."

Mr. Truman directed considerable criticism at the sections of the bill which provide for state operation of employment offices under regulations prescribed by the federal government and with federal money.

The President's refusal to sign the bill while congress was in recess constituted a so-called "pocket veto." In this circumstance, the bill is considered dead and must be reintroduced when congress reconvenes if the Presidential disapproval is to be overridden.

UNO Drafters Finish Work on Blueprint

BY WILLIAM FULTON

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Dec. 23—Concluding its five weeks' deliberations, the united nations preparatory commission worked all day Sunday putting final touches on the world organization plan. These super-government blueprints will be scrutinized by the general assembly scheduled to arrive here Jan. 10.

Little controversy marked the last sessions of the commission because Christmas-minded delegates were anxious to get back home for the holidays. In some cases delegates already had hurried off, leaving second and third team advisers to sit in.

As one of its final acts, the commission approved a proposal of its technical committee on trusteeship. This plan involves a system of international trusteeship to replace mandates of the old league of nations.

It will be recommended to the general assembly that states administering territories under league mandates undertake practical steps as early as possible to draw up trusteeship agreements with states directly concerned.

Accuracy Questioned

Adlai Stevenson, acting American delegate, questioned the technical accuracy of the wording as proposed in the draft of the resolution committee's report. He urged that the trusteeship system be applied to former enemy states and to territories voluntarily placed in trust, as will be mandated territories.

The only slightly discordant note of the session was struck when the reading of the committee report reached the proposal of the Ukrainian delegation that trusteeship council be "empowered to use various methods to insure the fullest possible expressions of wishes of the local population."

Great Britain, the world's principal colonial power, had opposed the Ukrainian idea in committee, and Prof. C. K. Webster of the United Kingdom delegation delivered a few remarks today that were interpreted as a criticism of censorship and suppression of free speech in Russia.

"We were exceedingly interested in the attitude taken by certain states on this subject and their advocacy of free speech and self-expression which showed furthering of that principle was making very wide progress in the world," Webster said, "and I think it would probably be admitted in some portions of the world that free expression is no greater than it is in some territories which are not entirely self-governing."

Report on Procedure

Another report adopted by the commission dealt with procedure for the general assembly. This document suggested that altho the first assembly session would deal primarily with organization, any delegate should be allowed to raise urgent world problems for consideration.

The commission set the stage for UNO's six principal organs: the general assembly, security council, economic and social council, trusteeship council, international court of justice, and the secretariat. It also decided that permanent headquarters of the united nations should be in the eastern part of the United States.

An interim committee, composed of representatives from 12 nations who are to work on the selection of most likely sites, will not get down to the real business until after Christmas and then may visit the United States. This group will make its recommendations to the general assembly.

THE STORY OF THE CENTURIES

Arranges Own Funeral Rites and Then Dies

After making arrangements for his own funeral, Howard Van Sinderen Tracy, 58, of 1238 Lake Shore dr., retired dealer in stocks and bonds, and active in civic affairs, died of a heart attack last night in his apartment.

A. S. Cooper, an undertaker at 1253 N. Clark st., said Tracy visited him several times in recent months to conclude arrangements for his funeral. Cooper said Tracy told him he suffered from a heart ailment, and believed that he could not live long. Cooper declined to disclose the arrangements, pending receipt of word from Tracy's daughter, Mrs. William Rossmoore, whose business address is 1 Fifth av., New York.

Writes Own Obituary

Tracy left with Cooper, and also with Mrs. C. May Tyrrell, manager of the building in which he lived, copies of an obituary he prepared himself. He came home last night about 7 o'clock, Mrs. Tyrrell said, and his body was found on the floor of his apartment shortly afterward, by another tenant.

He was active for years in civic affairs, and was particularly interested in criminology and prison reform. He was a member of the Chicago Academy of Criminology, and co-chairman with Prof. W. E. Puttkammer, of the Illinois Citizens Committee on Parole, a group representing 40 civic organizations.

Prominent in Civic Work

As president of the Citizens association, he inaugurated a campaign which resulted in new street signs for all Chicago intersections. He conducted a controversy in newspapers and by pamphlet which helped to secure the adoption of a new city building code.

Mr. Tracy was active in defeating an attempt to commercialize the lake front in Burnham and Grant parks. He was one of the founders of the Chicago Advertising council, which later became the Better Business bureau, was secretary and director of the Investors Protective bureau, and wrote several sections of the Illinois "Blue Sky" law. From 1931 to 1941 he was a director of the Chicago crime commission.

Author of Tariff Articles

He frequently represented Illinois at waterway conferences. Many of his articles on tariff were used in Republican presidential campaigns.

A native of Louisville, Ky., he was educated in private schools and by tutors. He was graduated from Harvard university in 1906.

In 1916 he married Miss Ruth Wilbur Alexander, who divorced him in 1925.

TRUMAN WILL LEAD NATION IN CHRISTMAS CELEBRATION TODAY

Washington, D. C., Dec. 23 (AP)—President Truman will lead the nation tomorrow in the first peace time Christmas celebration in five years. He will switch on lights of a White House Christmas tree and broadcast greetings to the world.

Mrs. Truman and her daughter, Margaret, left last Tuesday to spend the holidays in Independence, Mo., the President's home town. The President will take off in his private plane Tuesday morning to spend Christmas with his family there. He will return here Friday.

The President's plane will land at Kansas City municipal airport. Three Christmas dinners await the President, altho White House aids say he is a light eater and probably will only look on at two of them. He will visit his mother, Mrs. Martha Truman, 93, and his aunt, Mrs. J. T. Noland, 96.

BIG CAR OUTPUT IMPOSSIBLE NOW BEFORE MARCH 1

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 23 (AP)—The chairman of Michigan's labor mediation board said today that full scale automobile production is impossible before March 1 at the earliest.

Even if all strikes in the industry and its supplying units are settled in January, Philip Weiss explained, it would require several weeks to attain full production.

Weiss said the Ford Motor company is the only car manufacturer that does not depend solely upon outside sources for steel, glass, and other essentials. Even Ford cannot make enough of its own supplies to meet the heavy demands of all out production, he added.

Meanwhile, striking pickets at nearly 100 General Motors corporation plants thruout the nation were leaving windswept lines for a "pickets holiday" with their families. They have been on strike since Nov. 21 in a demand for a 30 per cent wage increase.

The CIO United Auto Workers and G. M. will hold their next meeting Dec. 26, their first since they were both called before a government fact finding board in Washington, D. C. The meeting, called to study "local union grievances," will be watched by federal authorities who have threatened to intervene again unless the two sides get together.

2 Vet Families to Move Into Demountables

Mayor Kelly in galoshes will make a ceremony today of the most momentous moving day in the forest preserves since the red men packed their portable wigwams for the last time.

In place of the teepees have arisen two demountable houses for palefaces, the first of several thousand hoped for by the mayor to help shelter Chicago war veterans. Today's celebration will be the installation of the first two families selected for tenants in the temporary colony in the woods at Foster and Tripp avenues.

The pioneers are Thomas Donnelly, 31, an ex-marine, who has two children, and Bernard Rein, 31, army veteran, who has one child. Neither had a permanent address yesterday.

Family Becomes Homeless

Donnelly had a bungalow when he left his family to go to war. "The lease expired and my wife couldn't renew it," he said. "Then the landlord decided to double up with us. He had two children, too. Pretty soon he decided the place was too crowded, and that's how we came to be homeless."

Donnelly had a cheese business before he went into service. Since his discharge he has been a bread salesman for a baking company. He arises at 2 a. m. to make a round of restaurant calls, but today, he said, the boss has told him he could drive the truck out to the forest preserve to help with the moving. Mrs. Donnelly and their children, Barbara Jean, 7, and Michael, 4, will be there to meet the van bringing their furniture from the warehouse.

Members of Family Separated

Rein has been separated from his wife since his discharge after four years' service. She has lived with relatives on the south side and he has been with his mother on the north side. Their son, Joseph, is 1½. Rein is employed by the veterans' administration.

Both the Donnellys and the Reins will have two bedroom demountables brought from the ammunition plant at Kingsbury Heights, Ind. Their rent will be $32.50 a month plus the cost of firing a coal heater.

Byron Gay, 59, Composer of 'Avalon,' Dies in West

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 23 (AP)—Byron Gay, 59, composer of "Avalon," "Horses," "Song of the West," and other tunes, died today. He was a classmate of Adm. Richard E. Byrd at the Annapolis naval academy, and a member of a Byrd expedition to the south polar regions.

JEEPS, TRUCKS SPEED GIs TO THEIR TRAINS

(Pictures on pages 4 and 5 and back page.)

The worst transportation snarl in the city's history apparently was broken in Chicago last night. More than 500 soldiers of the Illinois reserve militia, pressed into service when railroad officials reported that thousands of service men and women were stranded because of inability to obtain interstation transportation, opened a shuttle service between all major Chicago bus, train, and air line terminals.

The peak of the jamup, which filled all railroad stations with sardine packed mobs, was passed after the late afternoon trains departed for the east and west.

At one time during the week-end, hopeful travelers, the majority of them service men, were jamming the ticket offices so thoroly that nearly all railroads were forced to shut off ticket sales.

Militia Hauls Thousands

The biggest problem was the transportation of uniformed personnel from station to station. The crush of their travel was lightened, however, when Gov. Green ordered out the militia with all available mobile equipment. It was estimated that nearly 5,000 service men and women were hauled in militia trucks.

The serious press of travelers, rail officials said, was eased when many long distance travelers and week-end short run customers were cleared, and others, discouraged by Saturday's crowds, canceled their travel plans.

The order mobilizing the militia came after railroad officials reported that the crowding in all stations had reached the danger state, with shoulder to shoulder standees in trains and many civilians and service men still disappointed after hours, or even days, of waiting for reservations.

Three Regiments Called Out

Early yesterday morning Gov. Green issued the order calling for mobilization of three regiments of the militia. By 6 o'clock more than 100 trucks and jeeps were stationed at railroad terminals and were standing by to haul service men to bus and airline stations. Generally the militia just transferred the military travelers from one station to another but in some cases they took men and women to their homes.

The militia moved only uniformed soldiers and sailors and the railroads were giving priority to service men and women, allowing them to enter trains ahead of civilians and to buy tickets when they had been refused to civilians.

Travel to East Discouraged

Even tho the press of travelers had lessened considerably bus lines, the air lines, and some railroads requested that those desiring to travel east wait until after Christmas. One bus line announced that it would sell no tickets to the east until Wednesday. An air line said it was without space, excepting for possible cancelations, for several days.

The situation was alleviated also by a number of persons who called army headquarters offering automobile rides to service men. All such calls received by THE TRIBUNE were referred to the service men's centers.

Gov. Green and Maj. Gen. Leo M. Boyle, adjutant general of the militia, said that the emergency service will be continued as long as there are any service men to be helped.

HOPE FOR 'BREAKS'

Thousands of GIs waited dejectedly early yesterday in Chicago's railway, bus, and air line terminals in an effort to get transportation to their home towns by Christmas. Many of them, some wearing new discharge insignia, already have

YANKS WAITING AT BETHLEHEM TO WATCH RITES

BETHLEHEM, Dec. 23 (AP)—This little town nestled in the rolling hills of Judea will be the scene again tomorrow of the annual pilgrimage to the sacred spot where Christ was born nearly 2,000 years ago.

After a full day of prayer and benediction, of colorful processions and solemn meditation, pilgrims who have come from far and wide will witness the annual midnight ceremony of the celebration of the birth of the Christ child in St. Catherine's church, which adjoins the Church of the Nativity.

Thousands of visitors, many of them in American military uniforms, will file over the cobblestone streets of this ancient village to witness the entry of a religious leader as he approaches Bethlehem from Jerusalem and leads his priests, acolytes and followers into the Church of the Nativity in Manger square.

Masses to Follow Vespers

Thruout the afternoon they will take part in pontifical vespers. Masses will be read in the Grotto of the Nativity every half hour from noontime [4 a. m. Chicago time] tomorrow until 4 p. m. on Christmas.

The Christmas eve ceremonies will open before noon at the famous Jaffa gate at the walls of the old city of Jerusalem where high above the tower of David looms. It is here that the annual procession to Bethlehem begins.

It is only five miles from Jerusalem to Bethlehem, but in those five miles the history of Christian life was created. It is the road which Mary and Joseph traveled.

Proceed Thru Suburbs

The procession of motor cars and mounted escort will wind slowly into Jerusalem's suburbs and out to the Bethlehem road. Then it will move on thru the valley past the hill of evil counsel, past the well of the magi where the wise men rested on their journey.

At the site of Rachel's tomb, the procession will halt to be met by the mayor of Bethlehem and dignitaries of the town, before moving into the town.

BIG TRANSPORT FLIES 900 MILES WITHOUT CREW

Chilicothe, O., Dec. 23 (AP)—After flying some 900 miles without a pilot or crew, a C-47 army transport plane crashed in an open field 12 miles west of here tonight.

The ship, identified in Lincoln, Neb., by Lt. W. H. Aderhold of the Lincoln [Neb.] army air base, apparently had exhausted its fuel when it crashed here, for Sheriff Sam Mark of Ross county reported that the wreckage did not ignite upon impact.

The plane crashed about 10 p. m., Mark reported, some four hours after Lincoln air base officials reported that a crew of six had bailed out a C-47 near Dwight, Neb., and left the two motored transport cruising unguided thru the air.

Identification of the plane was made thru numbers on the fuselage and tail assembly.

POPE BESTOWS RED HATS ON 3 OTHERS IN U. S.

Rome Consistory Set for Feb. 18

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS

Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch of the Chicago archdiocese yesterday was named a cardinal by Pope Pius XII. At the same time, the pope created 31 other new cardinals, three of them from the United States and seven others from the western hemisphere, and announced the summoning of a consistory in Rome Feb. 18.

Only four of the new cardinals are Italians. As a result, the new college of cardinals will have only 28 Italians and 42 non-Italians, the highest number of non-Italians in the history of the college of cardinals.

The other three new American cardinals are Archbishop Francis J. Spellman of New York, Archbishop John Glennon of St. Louis, Mo., and Archbishop Edward Mooney of Detroit, Mich. Thus, for the first time, the United States will have five cardinals. Previously it never had more than four. The fifth is Cardinal Dennis Dougherty of Philadelphia, Pa.

Receives Congratulations

Members of Cardinal-designate Stritch's chancery gathered at the archiepiscopal mansion at 1555 N. State pkwy. yesterday afternoon to offer their congratulations to their ecclesiastical superior. Among them was the Most Rev. William D. O'Brien, junior auxiliary bishop of Chicago and president of the Catholic Church Extension society.

Bishop Bernard J. Sheil, founder and national director of the Catholic Youth organization, is en route to Europe. Others present included the Rt. Rev. Msgr. George J. Casey, vicar general of the archdiocese, and the Rev. Dr. Edward M. Burke, archdiocesan chancellor.

The cardinal-designate received the news with his characteristic simplicity of manner. He spoke quietly of the high honor coming to the Chicago archdiocese and to the city itself.

'Honor to Archdiocese'

"It pleases me greatly that our holy father has so signally honored the archdiocese of Chicago," the cardinal-designate said. "His great kindness shows above everything else his appreciation and esteem for the zeal of my clergy, the deep operative faith of my people, and the importance of Chicago.

"It is exquisitely pleasing to me that this recognition has come to the archdiocese. The honor done to my person fills me with overwhelming gratitude. In expressing my thanks to our holy father, I voice the appreciation of my clergy and people for the honor paid to them and to me. May God help me to be the worthy pastor of so great a flock."

Six for Latin America

Latin America, which has at present only one cardinal, will have six in the new college.

Canada, which has had only one cardinal for French speaking Quebec, now will be represented by an additional cardinal from English speaking Ontario.

Asia is represented for the first time with the appointment of a native Chinese cardinal.

The consistory Feb. 18 will be a gathering of the cardinals for the purpose of being informed officially that 32 new members have been added to their number. No approval of the pope's appointments is sought or is necessary.

Archbishop Mooney long has been well known at the Vatican for his work as a spiritual director of the American college and as apostolic delegate in Japan.

First Representation for Two

Detroit and St. Louis won representation in the college for the first time. St. Louis is the farthest west the church yet has reached in the selection of a United States cardinal. New York, Chicago, Baltimore, Md., and Boston, Mass., have been represented previously.

These are the other appointments, as announced in an extraordinary edition of Osservatore Romano, the Vatican newspaper:

Canada: Msgr. James Charles McGuigan, archbishop of Toronto.

Cuba: Msgr. Emanuel Arteaga y

Betancourt, archbishop of Havana.

Brazil: Monsignors Carlo Carmelo de Vasconcellos Mottas, archbishop of Sao Paulo; Jaime de Barros Camera, archbishop of Rio de Janeiro.

Chile: Msgr. Jose M. Caro Rodriguez, archbishop of Santiago.

Peru: Msgr. Juan Goalberto Guevara, archbishop of Lima.

Argentina: Msgr. Antonio Caggiano, archbishop of Rosario.

Appointment in England

England: Msgr. Bernard Griffin, archbishop of Westminster.

Hungary: Msgr. Josef Mindszenty, archbishop of Strigonia.

Germany: Monsignors Conrad von Preysing, archbishop of Berlin; Josef Frings, archbishop of Cologne, and Clement A. von Galen, bishop of Muenster.

Australia: Msgr. Norman Gilroy, archbishop of Sydney.

The Netherlands: Msgr. Jon De Jong, archbishop of Utrecht.

China: Msgr. Tomasso Tien, titular bishop of Ruspe and apostolic vicar of Tsingtao.

France: Monsignors Emile Roques, archbishop of Rennes; Pierre Petit de Julleville, archbishop of Rouen, and Jules Saliege, archbishop of Toulouse.

Poland: Msgr. Adam Stefan Sapieha, archbishop of Krakow.

Turkish Armenia: Gregory Peter XV., patriarch of Cilicia.

Mozambique, Portuguese East Africa: Msgr. Teodosio Clemente de Gouvenia, archbishop of Lourenco Marques.

Spanish Prelates Named

Spain: Monsignors Enrique Pla y Deniel, archbishop of Toledo and primate of Spain; Agostino Parrado y Garcia, archbishop of Granada; and Emanuel Arce y Ochotorena, archbishop of Tarragona.

Italy: Monsignors Giuseppe Bruno, secretary of the Sacred Congregation of the Council; Clemente Micara, titular archbishop of Apamea, Syria, and apostolic nuncio to Belgium; Ernesto Ruffini, archbishop of Palermo, Italy; Benedetto Aloisi Masella, titular archbishop of Mauritania and papal nuncio to Brazil.

Monsignors Von Preysing of Berlin and Von Galen of Muenster were noted for their firm opposition to the nazi regime in Germany, and Msgr. Saliege of Toulouse was the bitter French anti-nazi church leader who was credited with spiriting away from the wrath of the Germans in France a large number of Jews.

Plane Trip Planned

Altho arrangements for Cardinal-designate Stritch's journey to Rome have not been made yet, it is expected that he and his official delegation will go by chartered plane. When some one expressed gratification that the grand ceremony had been set for mid February instead of January, the archbishop remarked that Rome can be beautiful in February.

Archbishop Stritch was addressed yesterday as "your eminence," a cardinal's salutation, by members of his staff instead of "your excellency," which is the salutation given to bishops and archbishops. In fact, it was explained that he may be referred to as Cardinal Stritch now, even before the actual ceremonies take place in Rome.

The first lay group to receive his apostolic benediction after notification of his designation to the sacred college was a group of carolers from St. Michael's High school.

Children Sing in Mansion

The group sang "Silent Night" and "O Come, Immanuel" before a creche between two Christmas trees in the archiepiscopal mansion's great hall. After posing for their photograph with the cardinal-elect, they knelt for his blessing. The children were led by their president, Shirley Marnul, 1518 Cleveland av.

Archbishop Stritch spoke with enthusiasm for the world-wide nature of Pope Pius' nominations to the sacred college. He laid especial emphasis on the appointment of the head of the Armenian church, the patriarch of Cilicia, Turkish Armenia, as possibly the first cardinal ever named who uses an oriental rite instead of the Latin. He said he was not sure that the sacred college had ever previously been filled to the maximum total of 70.

Impressed by New Trend

Local Catholic observers spoke of being impressed by the revolutionary internationalization of the college of cardinals. They pointed out that the next pope will be elected by a college no longer overwhelmingly Italian. They did not anticipate any quick reduction in Italian influence and pointed out that the Italian language for generations has been dominant in the Vatican.

It was also explained that the most powerful group in the church is made up of the new inner or curial cardinals; those who hold posts in the Vatican. This small group for generations has been almost wholly Italian or Italianized.

Invested With Red Hat

When an archbishop is elevated to the cardinalate he is invested twice with the symbolic red hat. In the great investiture service in St. Peter's cathedral, the same red hat may be used for all of the new cardinals. Later each cardinal will be invested with a symbolic headpiece which he will actually take home, but he will not wear it home. After his death it will be suspended by golden wires in the apse of his cathedral and later over his tomb until it disintegrates.

When Cardinal Mundelein was elevated to the sacred college, he and Archbishop Hayes of New York were invested with the same red hat in St. Peter's. Later Cardinal Mundelein received a hat at the college of the propaganda in Rome. After the public consistory in St. Peter's cathedral, a secret consistory may be held when the new ring is placed on the new cardinal's hand and the century old ceremony known as the closing and opening of the mouths of the cardinals is held. They are assigned to their titular churches at the secret consistory.

The Rev. Edward V. Dailey, editor of the New World, official journal of the archdiocese, summed up Archbishop Stritch's qualities for his new high office as follows:

"Traditionally, the cardinalate has been reserved for the select few who have contributed outstanding services to the church and society. Archbishop Stritch eminently fits into this pattern of greatness. His outstanding episcopal labors for nearly 25 years, his apostolic zeal in the works of religion, his extraordinary appreciation and work in national and international issues signally qualify him for such an exalted post."

It was believed the canonization of Mother Cabrini would occur around the same date as the elevations of the new cardinals, but as yet the Very Rev. Msgr. Aristeo Simoni, vice postulator of her cause, at present in Canada, has received no official notification from the Vatican.

Furniture Warehouse Fire Causes $50,000 Loss

Fire for which a 5-11 alarm was sounded swept thru a block long warehouse of the Storkline Furniture corporation, 4400 W. 26th st., yesterday, causing damage estimated at $55,000. The blaze, discovered by Clyde Marcum, a watchman, rapidly spread thru the roof of the structure before it was extinguished under the direction of Michael J. Cody, first deputy fire marshal.

LIFE OF STRITCH: A CHILD PRODIGY; CARDINAL AT 58

College Graduate at 17; Long Friend of Pope

Cardinal elect Samuel Alphonsus Stritch, whose silver hair and rimless spectacles have for many years given him an older appearance than his years, was born Aug. 18, 1887, in Nashville, Tenn., the seventh of eight children. His father, Garrett, was a business man, whose family name, Stritch, has many variants in Ireland, such as Strete, Streate, and Stretys.

As a child, the future archbishop and cardinal of the great Chicago archdiocese, which is richer in worldly wealth and more numerous in human souls than many independent principalities, was a prodigy in his studies. He was graduated from parochial grammar school at the age of 10, from high school at 14, and from St. Gregory's college in Cincinnati, O., at 17.

Friend of Pius XII. Years Ago

His mother thought he was too young when he asked her permission to go to Rome to continue his studies for the priesthood.

"Mother," he replied jestingly, "don't you know it's a sin to interfere with any one's vocation?"

At Vatican City he met a young priest, Eugenio Pacelli, who is now Pope Pius XII. The two became good friends.

When Archbishop Stritch was graduated from the North American college in Rome in 1910, with the degrees of doctor of philosophy and doctor of sacred theology, he was only 22 years old and the minimum age requirement for ordination to the priesthood was 23. He was given a special dispensation.

Young, Brilliant Priest

One of the church's youngest and most brilliant priests, he returned to America and was named an assistant pastor of St. Patrick's church in Memphis, Tenn., by Bishop Thomas Byrne, who a few years earlier had urged the precocious youngster to go to Rome to study. In 1916 Father Stritch became Bishop Byrne's secretary and the following year he was named chancellor of the Nashville [Tenn.] diocese.

When he was only 34, in August, 1921, he was named bishop of Toledo, O., the youngest member of the hierarchy in the United States. His episcopal consecration was on Nov. 30, 1921. In 1930, at the age of 43, he was enthroned as archbishop of Milwaukee, Wis., in pontifical ceremonies attended by more than a third of the Catholic hierarchy in America.

His appointment to the Chicago archdiocese in January, 1940, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of his old friend, Cardinal George Mundelein, on Oct. 2, 1939, was the climax of one of the most brilliant rises in American ecclesiastical history.

Parishes Flourish Under Him

The episcopal administration of Archbishop Stritch in Toledo, Milwaukee, and Chicago has been marked by flourishing parishes and advocacy of charities. His accomplishments in Toledo included the construction of many buildings, a $1,000,000 Catholic high school, expansions of St. John's university and Mary Manse college, and the founding of St. Nazareth hall, a boarding school for grade school boys, and the novitiate for Notre Dame sisters in Toledo. The Catholic population of the Toledo see increased 41,300 during his incumbency.

As head of the Milwaukee archdiocese of 450,000 Catholics from 1930 to 1940, a period which coincided with the years of the depression, Archbishop Stritch met the call of charity with much of his time and strength. Diocesan associates later said that he made a period of great need also a period of great spiritual revival.

Known thruout the church in America for his charity, Archbishop Stritch called for funds each year in Milwaukee to support agencies and institutions for the care of orphans, needy, and handicapped.

Promotes Study by Laymen

The archbishop vitalized the Catholic campaign against indecency and promoted the organization of laymen's study and educational groups.

On his appointment to the important Chicago archdiocese, in which he became the spiritual leader of more than 1,500,000 Catholics, Archbishop Stritch said humbly in his inaugural address:

"In my poor person, you see the Shepherd whom Pius has sent."

Archbishop Stritch is known to the Catholic hierarchy of the world as a scholarly thinker and speaker on public questions of a wide variety. He is chairman of the administrative board of 10 archbishops and bishops of the National Catholic Welfare conference.

Pattern for Peace Told

The board expressed the disappointment of the Roman Catholic hierarchy of the United States at a meeting in Washington, D. C., Nov. 17 with the pattern of the peace. In a statement, entitled "Between War and Peace," the board suggested a democratic rather than totalitarian solution of the problems of the world and called for holding fast to America's free institutions against "the few amongst us who are trying to sabotage them."

In public statements which he has made, the cardinal-elect has denounced communistic and other theories advocating new political lineups based on class or party absolutism. "The absolute proletariat is just as much a tyrant as the absolute monarch," he said once. He has pointed to George Washington as an ideal for Americans to follow.

Currently in his Chicago archdiocese he has been concerned with re-establishing service men in civilian life and in combating the rising divorce rate. He has appointed a committee to help the service men and has called upon church societies to undertake studies on the subject of the ideal Catholic family life, with the view of making a valuable contribution to the stability and sanctity of the family.

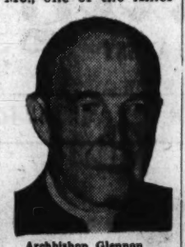
Will Aid and Advise Pope

As a cardinal, Archbishop Stritch will sit as one of the 70 ecclesiastical princes of the Catholic church who constitute the senate of the Roman pontiff, assisting and advising the pope in the government of the church.

Privileges of cardinals include: Precedence over all other ecclesiastical prelates, including primates and patriarchs; to wear the red, and cardinalitial robes and hat; to vote at oecumenical councils, and to elect the Roman pontiff. Oecumenical councils are those to which the princes of the church are convoked from the whole world and the decrees of which, when confirmed by the pope, are binding on all the members of the church.

Sketches of New American Cardinals

Archbishop John Joseph Glennon of St. Louis, Mo., one of the Americans who will become cardinals, stands 3 inches over 6 feet and has a thick brogue to attest his birth 83 years ago in Kinnegad, County Meath, Ireland. His studies were completed in Dublin and he was sent to the United States, then considered a missionary country, and assigned to the diocese of Kansas City, Mo. He was ordained in the cathedral of the Immaculate Conception in Kansas City Dec. 20, 1884.



Archbishop Glennon

He became a bishop 49 years ago and an archbishop 42 years ago, serving in Kansas City and St. Louis.

When he held open house in 1938 for his namesakes, nearly 100 boys visited Archbishop Glennon in his stone residence, near the new cathedral he erected in 1913 as part of a building and development program.

Backed Legion of Decency

Of prohibition, Archbishop Glennon said, "It was better to take the man from the drink than to take the drink from the man." He gave wholehearted support to the Legion of Decency and took early and positive action to forbid church funerals for gangsters killed in feuds or by police.

Archbishop Glennon delivered sermons and addresses at Eucharistic congresses at Chicago, Montreal, Dublin, Buenos Aires, and Budapest. His golden jubilee in 1934 was marked by festivities which lasted a week and were attended by 40 bishops and archbishops.

After being ordained, his first appointment was as assistant pastor in St. Patrick's church, Kansas City. After travel and study in Europe, he became assistant and then pastor in the Kansas City cathedral.

Made Archbishop in 1903

In succession he became vicar general and administrator of the diocese, coadjutor to Bishop Hogan of Kansas City, and titular bishop of Pinara, Asia Minor. He was appointed coadjutor archbishop of St. Louis in 1903 and became archbishop several months later after the death of Archbishop Kain.

In addition to the $1,300,000 cathedral at St. Louis, Archbishop Glennon simultaneously undertook the construction of Kendrick seminary, costing $700,000, for the training of priests. Since he became archbishop, 12 new churches have been constructed in St. Louis and 25 in its suburbs.

He encouraged the transition of German parishes to English speaking during the first World war, supported Ireland's claim to self-determination, withheld approval of Russia's government, and avoided participation in partisan politics.

He went to Rome as spiritual director of North America college.

Spends 7 Years in Orient

In 1926 he was named apostolic delegate to India, the first American priest to have an important diplomatic folio, and was made archbishop of Irenopolis. In 1931, he was made delegate to Japan, spending seven years in the orient and visiting every mission station in India and Japan.

He became archbishop-bishop of Rochester, N. Y., in 1933 and archbishop of Detroit in 1937. In the automobile center he conducted labor conferences and established courses to help priests deal with labor problems.

When allied planes bombed Rome in July, 1943, Archbishop Mooney expressed "surprise and regret," but pointed out that the fascist government could have made the bombing unnecessary by declaring Rome an open city.

FRANCIS J. SPELLMAN

Archbishop Francis Joseph Spellman of New York, as the church's military vicar of the armed forces of the United States, traveled extensively in Europe, Africa, and the orient during World War II. He is 56, was born in Whitman, Mass., and was ordained in Rome in 1916.

Archbishop Spellman

He went to Rome in 1922, was first American assistant to Cardinal Gasparri, the papal secretary of state, and afterward became private chaplain to the pope. He was the first American to be consecrated bishop in St. Peter's, when he was appointed assistant bishop of Boston in 1932. In 1939 he was made archbishop of New York, succeeding the late Cardinal Hayes.

EDWARD MOONEY

Archbishop Edward Mooney of Detroit, Mich., a tall, slender man, has a reputation as a church diplomat and as a friend of labor. He has been one of the most influential archbishops thru his chairmanship of the National Welfare conference, the policy forming body of the American hierarchy.

Archbishop Mooney

He was born in Mount Savage, Md., 62 years ago and spent his boyhood days in Youngstown, O. Ordained a priest in 1909 in North America college, Rome, he became professor of theology in St. Mary's seminary, Cleveland, O., and headmaster of the Cathedral Latin school there. In 1922 he served as pastor in Youngstown, and a year later

JAMES C. M'GUIGAN

Archbishop James Charles McGuigan of Toronto was the only Canadian included among the cardinals-designate. He was born in Prince Edward Island 51 years ago and was ordained in 1918. He was appointed archbishop of Regina in 1930 and archbishop of Toronto in 1935. Two years ago, while visiting in Canada, he expressed concern about evidence in Canada of laxity in war time morals.

DUTRA TO RULE UNDER INTERIM BRAZIL CHARTER

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Dec. 23 (AP)—Brazilian newspapers said today that President-elect Enrico Gaspar Dutra, who takes office early in 1946, would govern Brazil under terms of a temporary constitutional charter.

Newspapers expressing the views both of the majority Social Democratic party and the opposition National Democratic union agreed that the charter would serve as a basic proposal to be considered by the incoming congress when it drafts a permanent constitution.

The charter is being written by the interim government of President Jose Linhares. It will supercede deposed President Getulio Vargas' "new state" charter of 1937 which has been under heavy attack as being too authoritarian, the newspapers said.

BUDDIES OF GI START A FUND FOR ORPHAN, 2

Schenectady, N. Y., Dec. 23 (AP)—Carol Jorgensen, 2, an orphan, will get a college education when she grows up if 100 GI buddies of her daddy, the late Corp. Robert N. Jorgensen, of Schenectady, have their way.

The soldiers, members of an army service forces company at Fort Jackson, S. C., sent $100 to the Schenectady Gazette, and asked the newspaper to start a trust fund for Carol, who celebrated her second birthday Friday. The Gazette tomorrow will publish an appeal to help keep the fund growing.

Jorgensen was killed last month at near-by Watervliet in an automobile accident while on furlough. Carol's mother died shortly after the child was born.

BARE EDUCATION PROVISIONS IN LOAN TO BRITAIN

U. S. to Use Payments in Empire Schools

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 23—The pending multi-billion dollar United States loan to Great Britain includes a provision for American financing of the education of American students in England along the lines of the Rhodes scholarships, it was disclosed today.

There is no provision in the agreement, however, for British financing of the education of British students in the United States. The British negotiators of the agreement for the 4 billion 400 million dollar loan deemed it highly desirable to extend the endowment [at American expense] of English education for American students beyond the scope of the Rhodes scholarships but were not interested in American education for Englishmen.

Building Provided

In addition to the outright loan of 3¾ billion dollars for 55 years at 1.62 per cent interest, the agreement provides for the settlement of Britain's 25 billion dollar lend-lease debt for 650 millions on the same terms. The lend-lease settlement provides that the United States prior to Dec. 31, 1951, may call on Great Britain from time to time for an amount not to exceed 50 million dollars to be credited against the 650 millions.

Great Britain, under the terms of the agreement, is to honor such requisitions in sterling and the United States is to use the funds so furnished "exclusively to acquire land or to acquire or construct buildings in the United Kingdom and the colonial dependencies for the use of the government of the United States, and for carrying out educational programs in accordance with agreements to be concluded between the two governments."

Plan New Embassy

According to the state department the greater part of the funds obtained in this manner will be devoted to the provision of American diplomatic and consular offices in the United Kingdom and the British colonies.

A substantial portion of the funds will be allotted to the financing of American scholarships in English universities and other educational institutions.

The information available at the department was that the educational program is similar to that provided by Cecil Rhodes' will and in effect supplementary thereto. The Rhodes fund provides for the schooling of 96 American students annually at Oxford University. Each student receives 300 pounds sterling —about $1,200 at the present value of the pound. State department officials doubted that more than 100 scholarships would be provided under the American loan plan.

Rhodes scholars, several thousand of whom occupy influential positions in the United States government, American educational institutions and business and the professions, have been notably pro-British and active in promoting the interests of Britain in this country.

Still Curbs on Trade

Another disclosure today was that the loan agreement does not, in itself, open the sterling area to American trade. Even if the loan is approved by congress there will be these barriers to the purchase of American goods in the British empire and other countries in the sterling bloc:

1. The dollar pool, where-by most nations in the British commonwealth and certain other countries have tied their currency to sterling, turn over to London all dollars collected from the United States, and are in turn apportioned dollars as needed for essential purchases from the United States which cannot be duplicated within the sterling area.

2. Export-import licensing, whereby all countries in this area keep rigid control over their exports and imports to exclude unwanted goods from the United States and other nonsterling countries.

3. Empire preference, whereby each empire country sets substantially lower tariffs for the products of the other empire countries, compared to those it prescribes for the goods of outsiders.

Eliminates Dollar Pool

The loan agreement does eliminate the dollar pool within 12 months after the agreement becomes effective.

It does not, however, make any specific provision for the elimination of the other two barriers.

Britain agrees to accept "all important points" of a code of international trade ethics proposed by the United States "as a basis for international discussion." The United States proposals include the elimination of empire preferences, the curtailment of licensing restrictions, the reduction of tariffs and other barriers, and the establishment of an international trade organization.

Conference Called

If congress approves the loan, Britain is to call an empire conference and present to it the United States trade proposals. Anticipating that the conference will be successful, the United States already has invited 14 major trading nations to a meeting next spring to discuss tariff reductions and the easing of other trade barriers. Those invited were Britain, Canada, Australia, South Africa, New Zealand, and India, Russia and Czechoslovakia, France, Holland and Belgium-Luxemburg, Cuba and Brazil, and China.

If these two conferences succeed, a full-dress conference of all united nations will be held next June to approve the international trade program.

However, if any of these steps fails to produce full agreement—or if the final pact falls short of United States desires—Britain is relieved of any obligation to eliminate these remaining barriers against United States trade.

AILING VETERANS FACE LOSS OF HOSPITAL CARE

Lack of Beds May Bar Entry for Treatment

Washington, D. C., Dec. 23 (AP)—The shortage of hospital beds is so acute that the veterans administration soon may have to turn away some veterans whose disabilities are not connected with war or military service.

"That means, if we are to do anything about it, so we can continue to take all cases—both service and nonservice connected disabilities—the over-all policy will have to be changed," Maj. Gen. Paul R. Hawley, acting surgeon general of the veterans administration, said today in an interview.

"The authority to do this lies higher than the veterans administration."

20,000 Beds "Borrowed"

Hawley announced he had "borrowed" approximately 20,000 hospital beds, with medical care to go with them, from the army and navy last week to meet the crisis. He also asked for two more army hospitals to be placed under the veterans administration.

A total of 87,967 veterans of all American wars is receiving hospital or home care, an all time record. Two-thirds of these are classed as cases not connected with service, and the percentage of service connected cases among World War II. veterans is rising. They have priority and will crowd cases not connected with service from hospitals unless more space becomes available.

"We expect an increase of from 30,000 to 40,000 patients within two years," Gen. Hawley said.

Doctors Also Needed

"Under our present policy and limitations, it will be impossible to care for them all. We will need more doctors and more hospitals than are in sight."

The law says the veterans administration must care for veterans with injuries or illness traceable to military service. Other veterans may be accepted, with illness or injury not connected with service, if facilities are available and if the veteran has no money to pay his own way.

Hawley said the 20,000 beds borrowed from the army and navy are only stop-gaps because they are available on a temporary basis. Army and navy doctors will attend veterans in these beds.

In addition to these beds, the veterans administration recently took over seven army hospitals.

"But it would be a hollow gesture if we take over any more army or navy hospitals without the staffs to man them," Hawley said. "We will need from 7,500 to 10,000 doctors in the veterans administration within 10 years."

CAB CALLOWAY ARRESTED AFTER BALLROOM FIGHT

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 23 (AP)—Cab Calloway, Negro band leader, was booked on a charge of intoxication and resisting arrest after a scuffle last night at the entrance to a ballroom where he told police he had gone to visit another Negro band leader, Lionel Hampton. Calloway was treated at General hospital for cuts on the head.

When Hampton learned of the incident last night he refused to let his orchestra continue playing. The management refunded admissions to the 1,500 customers.

Police Sgt. William Garrett said Calloway told him that he and Felix H. Payne, Kansas City Negro, had gone to the ballroom at Hamptons' invitation but were denied admission by the doorman. The ballroom admits no Negroes.

William Todd, a special officer employed by the ballroom, told police he had refunded the money to Calloway and Payne and asked them to leave. Todd said Payne struck at him and Calloway "pushed" him to the floor. "I got up and struck Calloway, and then drew my revolver," Todd said. "I hit him on the head several times."

Calloway and Payne were released under $500 bonds for appearance in Municipal court Monday.

Drivers Warned

Last minute Christmas shoppers were advised last night that "messy weather" is expected today and motorists were told that bad driving conditions are expected on highways leading from Chicago in all directions.

The predictions were made by Gordon Dunn, federal meteorologist, who said that snow was scheduled for late last night with a steady fall probably thru the night and this morning. Sleet or freezing rain is scheduled to join the snow this afternoon.

The snow and rain will end tomorrow morning, Dunn predicted. He said warmer and more seasonable temperatures will prevail. The high this afternoon is expected to be about 28 degrees, dropping to about 25 degrees tonight. Christmas day probably will have a high of 32 degrees, Dunn said.

IRAN SAYS KURDS HELP TO DEFEND ARMY GARRISON

TEHRAN, Iran, Dec. 23 (AP)—An Iranian general staff officer said today that Kurdish tribesmen had joined the defense of the Iranian army's Rezaich garrison in Azerbaijan and that the reënforced post was holding out against its besiegers, whom he described as "Assyrians, Caucasians, and democrats."

Russian embassy and consular officials still withheld permits for foreign newsmen and American state department officials to visit northern Iran, explaining that applications had not been approved by military commandants.

The new government of Azerbaijan in northern Iran has claimed autonomy within the Iranian state, and an Iranian army officer said yesterday that "armed civilians and an unusual concentration of Russian tanks and troops at Garmsar," 75 miles southeast of Tehran, had been reported.

WARRIOR HYMN HE LOVED SUNG AT PATTON RITES

MEMORIAL TRIBUTE

A special memorial tribute to Gen. Patton will be given on W-G-N at 9:15 to 9:30 tonight. A modification of the Episcopal burial office will be read by the Rev. John Evans, religion editor of The Tribune. Robert Cromie, who returned yesterday from the Pacific prior to which he was with Patton in his push into Germany, will tell of his experiences with the general. Special music, including Gen. Patton's favorite hymns, will be played.

BULLETIN

LUXEMBURG, Dec. 24 [Monday] (AP)—The body of Gen. Patton arrived at Luxemburg early this morning after a 12 hour journey from Heidelberg.

(Picture on back page)

HEIDELBERG, Germany, Dec. 23 (AP)—Funeral services for Gen. Patton were performed with striking military simplicity today, and the body of the colorful warrior was then borne away to be buried among the 10,000 white crosses of the American cemetery in Luxemburg.

Sgt. Charles J. Kadow

Two army chaplains conducted a 22 minute Episcopal service marked by the singing of one of the general's favorite hymns, "The Son of God Goes Forth to War," and the recital of two of his best liked psalms, the 90th and the 63d.

There were no eulogies.

Mrs. Patton, grieving but erect, and her brother, Frederick L. Ayer, Boston, Mass., attended the services, which were held in the 16th century Christ church in the heart of this picturesque university town.

Body Off to Luxemburg

At the conclusion, Gen. Patton's body was carried on a halftrack driven by Sgt. Henry Mason, Fort Wayne, Ind., to the railroad station. The mile long route was lined by more than 6,000 American soldiers and German civilians who had stood for hours awaiting the procession.

After a 19 gun salute the flag draped casket was placed aboard one of two special funeral trains that rolled away for Luxemburg. Tomorrow, Gen. Patton will be buried in the American military cemetery at Hamm, near Luxemburg.

About 600 soldiers, including virtually all the top ranking American officers in Europe and representatives of a dozen countries, crowded into the church.

Mrs. Patton and her brother sat in a front pew with Lt. Gen. Geoffrey Keyes, commander of the 7th army. A few feet away the casket rested before an altar covered with red and pink roses, carnations, camelias and mimosa.

On the other side of the church sat the pallbearers, six enlisted men selected for their soldierly qualities. One was Master Sgt. William L. Meeks, Negro, Junction City, Kas., who was Gen. Patton's orderly for eight years and was with him in all his campaigns.

Other active pallbearers were Sgt. Oliver R. Day, Hudson, N. C.; Sgt. Vernon P. Rehberg, Painesville, O.; Sgt. Frank Huboly, Bulger, Pa.; Staff Sgt. Charles J. Kadow, 4849 N. Paulina st., Chicago, and Staff Sgt. Ben Heck, St. Louis, Mo.

Mrs. Patton, wearing a brownish grey fur coat with a tri-cornered black hat, arrived at the church at 3 p. m. in a black sedan. She wore no veil. Slowly she took her place in the front of the church, and turned to look at the choir loft when a soldier choir of 36 voices began to sing the hymn "The Strife Is Over."

The two chaplains who conducted the service were Col. Edwin R. Carter, Richmond, Va., and Col. Loren T. Jenks of Michigan.

Many Generals Follow Body

Before the service, the general's body, preceded by an army band and 16 armored cars from Gen. Patton's old 15th cavalry, was borne thru the streets from the hilltop villa where it had rested in state.

Dozens of generals, including Joseph T. McNarney, new commanding general of United States forces in Europe, and officers representing several foreign governments were in the procession.

Col. Frank Fraser, Phoenix, Ariz., chief of the American army mission to Belgium, said Patton's grave in Luxemburg would be tended by that little duchy's royal family.

Fraser said every American buried in the hillside cemetery at Hamm has been adopted by some one in Luxemburg who is charged with care of the grave. Most of the 10,000 dead were men Gen. Patton commanded in the battle of the bulge.

DEVALUATION OF FRANC IS VOTED, MINISTERS SAY

PARIS, Dec. 23 (AP)—The French cabinet voted today to devaluate the franc, several ministers reported at the conclusion of a meeting that lasted four and a half hours. The cabinet members said they were sworn to secrecy as to the exact new rate of exchange.

Previously it had been predicted that the franc would probably be pegged at 125 to the dollar and 500 to the pound sterling. The present rate is 50 to the dollar and 200 to the pound.

No announcement was issued at the close of the cabinet meeting, contrary to usual practice.

The Bourse is closed for the holidays.

Favor Bretton Woods

Earlier today the finance committee of the constituent assembly voted to recommend ratification of the Bretton Woods monetary agreement. This action was regarded as clearing the way for the move to devaluate the franc.

The committee will present its recommendation to Wednesday's meeting of the assembly. If ratified this would bind France not to change the value of the franc unilaterally by more than 10 per cent for a period of five years after Dec. 31.

Finance Minister Rene Pleven said that while the quota of 4.8 per cent granted France in the international monetary fund did not measure up to her "normal position in world trade," adherence to the agreement would give France the possibility of acquiring foreign currency without expenditure of gold bullion.

Proponents of devaluation have asserted that devaluation will tend to revive France's foreign trade, which is largely dormant, and inspire more production that will cut the present high cost of living.

Pleven said that negotiations will be undertaken with the United States next year to determine how to finance American exports to France now that lend-lease is abolished.

Egypt O.K.s Pact

CAIRO, Egypt., Dec. 23 [Reuters]—As the Egyptian senate today approved participation in the Bretton Woods agreement, Finance Minister Makram Ebeid declared that Egypt will never agree to scale down her sterling balances. Ebeid added that Egypt had asked the British government to fix a date before March for negotiations to solve the problem of sterling balances abroad. The Egyptian chamber of deputies also approved the Bretton Woods pact.

Serbian Church Favors Separation from State

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Dec. 23 [Reuters]—The holy synod of the Serbian Orthodox church has informed the Yugoslav government that it will not oppose the projected separation of church and state under the new Yugoslav constitution, but asked the constituent assembly to consider its wishes regarding marriages, religious instruction, and church courts.

PRESS EFFORTS TO MOVE TROOPS STUCK IN PORTS

Send Buses for Vets from Arizona

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 23 (AP)—Some 168,000 Pacific veterans will spend Christmas, the first "in the states" in several years for many of them, at west coast ports awaiting transportation home.

Plans are under way to entertain thousands of the men in private homes Christmas day. The army and navy are arranging special programs of entertainment, turkey dinners, and presents for all.

Meanwhile, overloaded trains, buses, and air lines struggled to get as many men on their way home as possible.

In San Francisco army officials said the bay area contained some 41,000 returning soldiers tonight, 9,300 of them living aboard three troop ships tied up at piers.

Send Buses for Vets

Thanks to an idea worked out by the Phoenix, Ariz., Junior Chamber of Commerce, Arizona service men who had been held up at Fort MacArthur, San Pedro, Cal., were en route home for Christmas aboard special buses sent for them from points in Arizona.

Citizens of Twin Falls, Idaho, who had a similar idea, sent two buses to San Francisco to pick up service men whose homes are in that area.

At Treasure Island were 20,269 navy personnel awaiting processing and transportation.

The army backlog will skyrocket with the arrival on the west coast tomorrow of 15,246 more soldiers. Today more than 7,000 soldiers were shipped out of the San Francisco bay area.

Clears Troop Jam

The situation at other west coast ports:

LOS ANGELES: The one bright spot in the troop jam. A backlog that reached 12,000 a few days ago has been cleared, the army announced.

SEATTLE: There are 13,809 troops in staging areas and 7,564 aboard ships.

TACOMA: There are approximately 18,000 troops aboard ships awaiting debarkation and 13,507 in the Fort Lewis staging area.

PORTLAND: 4,671 in the staging areas. Among these were 1,763 quarantined aboard the troop ship Grundy until Christmas morning because one of them has smallpox. The navy had 3,500 men on hand.

FCC SCHEDULES 55 OUTLETS FOR FM IN ILLINOIS

Illinois has been assigned 55 tentative frequency modulation [FM] radio channels by the federal communications commission. Twenty of this number are slated for the Chicago area.

The assignment was made in a plan for FM channel allocations which would provide the nation with approximately 1,500 of the static-free stations. In general, the number of FM channels assigned on a preliminary basis to each area exceeds the number of existing standard broadcast stations by 50 to 100 per cent.

While the plan sets the number of channels to which each area is entitled, it will only be a guide, with possible reallocations as demands are learned, it was said.

Allocations include: Chicago-Elgin-Evanston, 17; Aurora-Joliet, 2; Waukegan, 1. Others in Illinois are: Bloomington, 2; Cairo, 1; Carbondale, 1; Carthage, 2; Decatur, 2; Freeport, 1; Galesburg, 2; Harrisburg, 2; Herrin, 2; Jacksonville, 2; Kankakee, 1; Mount Vernon, 1; Peoria, 4; Quincy, 2; Rockford, 1; Rock Island, 1; Springfield, 3; Tuscola, 2; Urbana-Champaign, 3.

Mrs. Herbert J. Lamoureaux and her daughter, Elaine, in their Liverpool, England, home.

LIVERPOOL, England, Dec. 23 (AP)—Since Herbert John Lamoureaux, 22, a former American soldier, could not swim to his English wife, she is determined to sail to him. So said Mrs. Veronica Lamoureaux today.

Herbert J. Lamoureaux

Lamoureux, wishing to spend Christmas with his wife and their five weeks old daughter but denied a visa to enter Britain, dived from the ship Rushville Victory yesterday and attempted to swim five miles to shore.

Mrs. Lamoureaux said she was confident she could book passage to the United States as soon as their daughter, Elaine, is three months old, on Feb. 16.

"He'll get in touch with me by wireless," she asserted. "He'll find a way. He's only 22, but he's a man of great resourcefulness."

TURKISH PRESS ASSAILS REDS' CLAIM ON KARS

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Dec. 23 [Reuters] — Russian suggestions that the province of Kars, in eastern Turkey, be transferred to Russia—suggestions that James F. Byrnes, United States secretary of state, is reported to have studied before attending the meeting of foreign secretaries in Moscow—today raised protests in the Turkish press.

"If Russia does not drop these claims, Turkey will undoubtedly envisage war," the daily newspaper Vakit asserted. The newspaper Ulus said, "We shall not take seriously some reports that are coming from Moscow about this."

Armenian Demand Reported

MOSCOW, Russia, Dec. 23 (AP)—The newspaper Pravda published a Tass dispatch from Egypt today reporting that a group of Armenians in Alexandria was seeking to have Turkey give certain frontier districts to soviet Armenia. The dispatch said the group offered a program based on the contention that Turkey had forcibly split up Armenia after World War I.

FBI CAPTURES 2 ARMY FUGITIVES TURNED BANDITS

Robert F. Smith, 21, of 4419 Greenwood av., and Bolesas W. Czajkowski, 18, of 12254 Wallace st., have been arrested in Chicago by the federal bureau of investigation, George R. McSwain, special agent in charge here, said yesterday. They are accused of kidnaping and robbing four persons and stealing five automobiles since they escaped as AWOL prisoners of war from Camp Robinson, Ark. Dec. 14.

Robert F. Smith [top] and Bolesas W. Czajkowski

McSwain said the pair stole a loaded carbine rifle from a guard whom they overpowered, then took an army jeep and three .45 caliber revolvers from three military police who attempted to question them.

The prisoners, McSwain said, have admitted kidnaping and robbing Stanley Anderson of Lake Geneva, Wis.; Jerome Brenman of Gary, Ind.; Kenneth Swanson of Grayslake, Lake county, and Fred Keller, assistant vice president of Phillips university, Enid, Okla.

The two will be arraigned today before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker on charges which may include kidnaping, violation of the Dyer act by transporting stolen cars over state lines, of theft of government property, and of desertion from the army. Smith served from 1940 to 1941 in the national training school in Washington, D. C., for juvenile delinquency. Since he entered the army in 1943 he has been AWOL five times.

INDONESE KILL 3 IN ATTACK ON JAVA HOSPITAL

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 23 (AP)—An Indonesian attack today on a Red Cross emergency hospital in the Kramat district of Batavia in which one patient and two native servants were killed raised to eight the death toll from violence in that area since Thursday.

Six native servants were wounded in the hour-long attack on the hospital, making a total of nine hurt in four days. Five royal air force men were killed last week in ambuscades in the district, which has been declared out of bounds to all British forces. The district borders an evacuee camp still housing 2,000 Dutch women and children.

One Indian soldier was killed and four others wounded in the mid-Java city of Semarang, where British forces encountered stiff opposition at road blocks in attempts to clear the eastern part of the city.

Reach an Agreement

Five Indonesians were arrested in connection with the finding of 12 mutilated bodies of Eurasians in Bandoeng Thursday.

The Aneta new agency quoted a British spokesman as saying that an "agreement in principle" had been reached with Premier Sjahrir of the Indonesian republic on employing members of the Indonesian peace preservation corps [TKR] in helping to evacuate Japanese troops from Java.

Sjahrir said yesterday that if the plan works to British satisfaction the Indonesian government was prepared also to guarantee removal of Dutch internees to British areas for evacuation from Java.

Dutch Decry Force

THE HAGUE, Holland, Dec. 23 [Reuters]—A Dutch "committee for active democracy" today informed Hubertus Van Mook, lieutenant governor of the Dutch East Indies, that the use of force in the Java strife prevents an early settlement.

The group added that as Indonesia is not independent, its president, Soekarno, cannot be charged with trying to bring independent countries under foreign domination.

"The present violence, together with the dangerous rousing of nationalist sentiment both at home and overseas, give cause for fear that the sensible Dutchman and Indonesian appealing for consultation will not be heard," the committee members said.

An opposite demand that "anarchism in Java be vigorously suppressed" was presented today by "a number of Dutch associations," the Netherlands news agency said. These sent a telegram of loyalty to the queen. Premier Schermerhorn spoke to them.

Russian Paper Headlines 'Crime Wave in U. S. A.'

MOSCOW, Dec. 23 (AP)—The Russian army newspaper Red Star today printed a double column headline, "Unprecedented Crime Wave in U. S. A.," over an account of a speech by FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover before the International Association of Chiefs of Police in Miami Beach, Fla. [Hoover told the police chiefs Dec. 10 that crime in the United States was on the increase and that he feared gangsterism would return.]

U. S. TO EXPAND NATIONAL GUARD AIR CORPS UNITS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 23 (AP)—Post-war National Guard air units are expected to use a number of the air fields now being abandoned by army air forces as war time requirements shrink.

War department officials, planning for participation of state units in the national defense system, said today the operation of a National Guard air force of perhaps 2,000 first line planes would require facilities far more comprehensive than those of pre-war days.

Present plans contemplate a National Guard air force almost double the size of the pre-war force in number of units and far more than that in planes and men. Currently, the idea is for about 80 squadrons, compared with 44 before the war.

Pre-war National Guard air units generally were observation units. Post-war emphasis will be placed on fighter and fighter-bomber types.

Trucks and Jeeps Speed GIs to Their Trains

been delayed too long for them to reach home tomorrow. Others clung to the hope that "the breaks," which finally come, would permit them to be with their families for Christmas.

Nineteen enlisted men and one officer of the 526th armored infantry battalion, en route from Wiesbaden, Germany, to Fort Lewis, Wash., for discharge, will be lucky if they reach their homes by Jan. 1. They left Boston Friday, the men said.

Dream of Months Spoiled

One of the group, Pvt. Donald A. Phillips, 22, of Tacoma, Wash., has an 18 months' old daughter, Karen, whom he has never seen. He had planned for months, Phillips said, to be home with the baby and his wife, June, for the holidays. The group departed on a train from Union station about 1 p. m.

Sgt. Norman Grotke, 26, of Buffalo, N. Y., en route from the west coast to Camp Atterbury, Ind., for discharge after five months on Saipan, missed his Indiana bound train at the Union station because his train from Denver, Col., was one hour late.

Grotke had been forced to spend almost all of his money at Denver, when he was directed onto a train for which his army transportation was not good, but he said he had not minded because he thought he would be discharged in time to be home for Christmas. Missing his train, however, made it appear that his Christmas would be spent in camp.

At Least Four Men Happy

Four young air force enlisted men were among the few jubilant persons in Union station. They said they thought they could get passage aboard an afternoon train for Pittsburgh and then they would be home for Christmas. The men reported that they were among 10,000 soldiers released on leave from Keesler field, Biloxi, Miss., at 5 p. m. Friday. When they got to the railway station there, they found a line of 5,000 waiting to purchase train tickets.

However, they went to the bus station, the soldiers said, found a similar situation there, but pooled their funds and hired a taxi cab to drive them approximately one hundred miles to New Orleans, La. There they finally got transportation to Chicago. The men are Pvt. James Stover, 18, Knox, Pa.; Pvt. Theodore Markatos, 19, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Pvt. Robert Harding, 19, of Pittsburgh, and Pvt. Robert Hadfield, 18, of Philadelphia, Pa.

One Thinks He's Lucky

At the 12th st. Central station, Corp. William Hinman, 24 just arrived in the United States from Okinawa, finally decided he could not get transportation to his home in Springfield, Ill., and telephoned his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Scott Hinman, to drive to Chicago to get him.

He took the delay philosophically, however, and declared, "I'm lucky. When I left Okinawa, there were lots of 80 and 90 point men waiting shipment home; there was even one man with 102 points, but they were told there weren't any ships. There were plenty of ships there, tho."

In the bus depot at 12th st. and Wabash av., Corp. William Hill, 20, of Stockton, Jo Daviess county, was waiting impatiently for transportation to his home. He was due in Chicago Saturday afternoon from Maxton Army Air base, N. C., but arrived here yesterday.

Hope to Get on Train

Corp. William Kelly, 21, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Pvt. John Lynch, 24, of New Brunswick, N. J., were 18 hours late arriving in Chicago en route to their homes from Topeka Army Air field, Kas. They hoped to get aboard a train late yesterday afternoon at the Union station.

At the La Salle st. station, Marine Pvt. Walter M. Fleming, 21 of Jersey City, N. J., en route to his home after being discharged in San Diego, Cal., said he lost 18 hours coming here from Gallup, N. M.

One hundred and two Chicago area men who arrived at Chicago airport on a C-97 transport plane yesterday, went immediately to Fort Sheridan to await discharge. A second C-97 arriving here carried 100 men from the Detroit, Mich., area.

MOSCOW PARLEY FAILS TO SHARE ATOM SECRET

MOSCOW, Dec. 23 (AP)—The foreign ministers of the United States, Russia, and Britain have considered the American-British-Canadian policy on world control of atomic energy but informed quarters said today that no secrets had been given away.

A Moscow theater audience applauded warmly tonight when United States Secretary of State Byrnes, British Foreign Secretary Bevin and Soviet Foreign Commissar Molotov shook hands in the glow of spotlights at Bolshoi theater just before a performance of the ballet "Cinderella."

Byrnes came to the theater after a two hour meeting with Generalissimo Stalin at the Kremlin. It was Byrnes' second talk with Stalin within five days. He was accompanied to the Kremlin by United States Ambassador W. Averell Harriman and Charles E. Bohlen, chief of the Russian section of the state department.

[The Moscow radio said Molotov also was present.]

The extent of the progress toward disposition of the atomic question was not disclosed. This problem is one of the major items on the agenda of Byrnes, Molotov, and British Foreign Secretary Bevin.

Progress Continues

During the discussions Byrnes and Bevin were said to have adhered to the statement issued in Washington Nov. 15 by President Truman and Prime Ministers Attlee and W. L. Mackenzie King which declared control of atomic power should be handed over to a united nations commission and that production secrets would be kept until effective safeguards are devised.

As the three foreign ministers moved into their eighth day of discussions, informants said the progress of the conference remained uninterrupted. One source observed that the current meetings were much more friendly in tone than the five-nation foreign ministers' conference in London, which ended in a deadlock last October.

Guests of Harriman

Byrnes, Bevin, and Molotov met today in the soviet foreign commissar's office in the Kremlin and were luncheon guests of Ambassador Harriman at Spasso house.

Generalissimo Stalin was not present at yesterday's meeting in the Kremlin, the first held there. It was explained that no special significance was attached to the fact that the Kremlin had been used as a meeting site since the informal sessions in Molotov's spacious office were arranged as a matter of convenience.

5,000 GET OUT AT FT. SHERIDAN IN THREE DAYS

Working at top speed with a reduced staff to get as many men out of the army by Christmas as possible, the separation center at Fort Sheridan will have discharged 5,000 soldiers in the three-day period ending tonight.

That was announced last night by Brig. Gen. John T. Pierce, commanding general at Fort Sheridan. Normal capacity of the discharge center is 1,500 a day, but in the last few days, this has been stepped up to 1,600 or more a day.

The shortage in personnel results from the fact that one-fourth of the separation center staff was granted Christmas furloughs. Another one-fourth will go home for New Year's day.

EMPIRE'S FOOD SURPLUS DOLED OUT BY BRITISH

Own Needs Are Put Ahead of UNRRA

BY QUENTIN POPE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Dec. 24 [Monday]—The British have established an overlordship of empire food supplies and are determining the dimensions of relief shipments to war wrecked nations, officials admitted today in explaining New Zealand's silence on the UNRRA food supply issue.

London completed long term deals with New Zealand and Australia last year, purchasing the total exportable surplus of both countries for long periods, it was explained. Hence these empire lands lack any export surpluses which might be shipped on UNRRA account.

British Needs Come First

The British have therefore undertaken distribution of empire grown foodstuffs in the European zone. It it believed here the arrangement also covers Canada, officials said.

London, however, releases foodstuffs for European distribution only after Britain's own needs are filled, and ultimate decisions on UNRRA supplies thus are taken by the British.

Old Policy Continued

The joker in this plan for the dominions is that foodstuffs are believed to go forward as of British origin. This continues the policy London followed after D-day when large quantities of foodstuffs were released from British stockpiles in the early liberation period under extreme American pressure.

It was then found that foodstuffs packaged for distribution before the Normandy invasion were marked as of British origin, tho they were mostly lend-lease supplies.

2 GIs KILLED, 52 HURT AS GALE HITS CRUISER

PONTA DELGADA, Azores, Dec. 23 (AP)—Two American soldiers were killed, one lost overboard, and 52 were injured when a gale struck the United States heavy cruiser Portland as she was en route to America with 600 GI's. The Portland resumed her voyage today after putting in here for refueling. The vessel's aviation section, which was used as a dormitory, had been broken in by heavy seas.

Twenty-two of the most seriously injured soldiers were transferred to the U. S. S. Dearborn and will be flown home by the army transport command.

The war transport Pirloston, carrying 1,500 men home from Europe, also put in for refueling. The battleship Washington was reported undamaged and proceeding toward America at reduced speed thru heavy seas.

TRIBUNE ASKED TO RESCUE WIFE, CHILD IN BERLIN

A desperate Chicago husband and father yesterday appealed to THE TRIBUNE to aid him in getting word to his wife and 11 year old son thru the darkness that has rolled over Europe as country after country falls under soviet influence.

The Chicagoan, Edward Krampitz, 51, of 5812 Iowa av., a bulldozer operator, appealed to THE TRIBUNE after Henry Wales, Tribune foreign correspondent, disclosed last Saturday that Krampitz's family was in Berlin after a desperate two week march from Lipno, Poland.

Blames Soviet Rule

Krampitz said he believed that his wife, Hulda, 45, had been forced to leave her property at Lipno, from which she derived her sole support during the war, and trek with her son, Harry, on foot to Berlin thru action of the soviet dominated Polish government.

Krampitz pointed out that Lipno is in a section of Poland which is traditionally German speaking and where many citizens do not understand Polish. He believed that the new Polish government had forced his family out of the area for that reason and sent them into Germany in the process of making Poland conform to Moscow standards.

Krampitz, who has appealed to immigration authorities in Philadelphia for permission for his wife to enter the United States, now finds a complication in the fact that there is no civilian mail to Germany altho there is to Poland. He has no address to which to cable money or the visa if and when it arrives.

Lacks Food Card

A card from the Red Cross section of the united nations relief organization [UNRRA] is necessary before mail may be sent to a displaced persons camp, postal authorities said. Wales' dispatch said Mrs. Krampitz and her son are near the Teltowerdamm camp in Berlin. THE TRIBUNE will ask Wales to see that Mrs. Krampitz sends the proper card so that her husband may contact her.

Krampitz's wife is not an American citizen, therefore she must remain in Berlin and apply for naturalization. Wales' dispatch said she had no place to go, no place to sleep, and no food card, altho Krampitz has cabled her $100 and is willing to pay her plane passage from London.

Mrs. Krampitz and her son, who had returned to Poland, were stranded when the war broke out. Krampitz was in the United States seeking a job.

STRIKE TIES UP ALL HOSPITALS IN COPENHAGEN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Dec. 23—All Copenhagen hospitals were paralyzed today as maintenance workers struck as a protest against the reappointment of Dr. Jens Nielsen as chief staff physician of Finsens hospital. He had been acquitted of collaboration charges by a doctors' honor court.

The strikers included cooks, kitchen assistants, porters, and janitors. They demanded that the case be reopened and decided by a state court.

Hoping to end the strike before Christmas, authorities announced tonight that Dr. Nielsen would be tried in a state court. The decision followed a threat by an organization of young doctors and by nurses to join the strike on Christmas eve. Negotiations to end the walkout will be conducted tomorrow.

Empire Is Washed Up in India, Nehru Asserts

CALCUTTA, India, Dec. 23 [Reuters]—Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, president of the Indian national congress, told a meeting of students here that in the context of history the British empire in India "has ceased to be, tho it may drag on a miserable existence for a little while longer." "You may take it from me that their attempts to hold on may succeed for a year or two, but this will not result to the credit or profit of British imperialism," he added.

26 NAZI PLANTS MADE AVAILABLE AS REPARATIONS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 23 (AP)—Gen. Joseph T. McNarney said today 26 large plants in Germany have been made ready for delivery as war reparations to the countries which suffered at nazi hands, and 58 others have been earmarked.

The general, military governor of the United States zone of occupation, reported that "many more" of the plants in the American zone are being surveyed for inclusion in the planned removal of Germany's war potential. He spoke from Germany on an NBC broadcast.

100,000 Nazis in Custody

Approximately 100,000 Nazis now are in custody as members of organizations being tried by the international tribunal at Nuernberg, McNarney said. Thousands of Nazis have been removed from government and industry and "denazification is well advanced," the general added.

Maj. Gen. John H. Hilldring, chief of the war department's civil affairs division, also a speaker on the program, said that the four power rule of Germany "has been exceedingly successful" and that "our ability to get along with our allies is no longer an academic question—it's a positive and proven fact."

Expects French Agreement

Hilldring said he was confident that the disagreement between France and the other allies over centralization of administration will be "argued out and settled." The French, he said, want to hold up centralization "until we decide what we're going to do with the Rhineland and the Ruhr."

BRITAIN FIRST, RUSSIA SECOND

The Saturday Evening Post is printing the diary of Capt. Harry C. Butcher, who for the three years of American participation in the European war was naval aid to Gen. Eisenhower. In this position Butcher was, with the general's approval, able to set down many of the details of diplomatic conversations which lay behind the military decisions of the war.

The first instalments, which run to the eve of the African invasion, give a clear picture of Mr. Roosevelt's policy in the European war. He and his advisers, including Harry Hopkins in particular, were all out for a second front in France to save Russia in 1942, no matter what the cost in American lives. It was only when the British intervened to channel American power into the support of their policy that Mr. Roosevelt abandoned this desperate venture. He was pro-Russian until the British got to him. Then his colonialism asserted itself.

In July, 1942, when Butcher started his diary, he wrote that President Roosevelt and the American joint chiefs of staff were anxious to help Russia stay in the war, and to that end proposed a "quick thrust" across the channel that summer. Prime Minister Churchill and the British chiefs of staff opposed this. They wanted to attack in North Africa "to get on Rommel's tail."

Altho Hopkins, Gen. Marshall, and others flew from Washington in the attempt to convert the British to the second front idea, Churchill remained adamant. The American generals even argued that an unsuccessful attack would be worth while, if it relieved pressure on the Russians. They had their orders from the White House and they followed them.

It was only British insistence that saved the American people from such a holocaust. The cross-channel attack was dropped, "but," Butcher wrote, "the President insists that American troops must be in action against Germany some place in 1942."

The American navy originally expected the British navy to provide cover for the African invasion forces. There was not enough British strength to cover landings on the Atlantic coast of Morocco and in the Mediterranean as well. Churchill wanted to take the desperate gamble of attacking in the Mediterranean alone, which would have subjected American troops to the hazard of being cut off at Gibraltar, which was extremely vulnerable to air and land attacks. Gen. Eisenhower objected. Eventually the landing at Casablanca was included in the plan, but only after authorities at Washington had made American naval units available to supplement those of the British. It was during these discussions that Capt. Butcher again noted in his diary, "The President insists on ground action for American troops in 1942, the sooner the better."

This is hardly the picture of Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policy which he and his followers were trying to present to the American people while it was being carried out. Mr. Churchill is quoted as saying that Mr. Roosevelt was suggesting joint military operations in Africa to him even before the United States entered the war. Pearl Harbor may have offered the excuse, but the intent was there long before.

The navy originally said that it could not provide ships to convoy the African invasion. It, apparently, realized that we also had responsibilities in the Pacific, even if the occupant of the White House did not. Eventually the navy was overruled because the ships were provided. They obviously were provided at the cost of operations in the Pacific, where at the time of the preparations for the African invasion our marines were dying by the thousands in the jungles of Guadalcanal against a Japanese foe that was constanly reënforced because we could not establish naval superiority in the area.

Mr. Roosevelt's partisans made a great point, after the African landings, that he had deliberately delayed them so as not to be accused of trying to influence the 1942 congressional election. The facts as they now appear are that Roosevelt was pressing for action as early as possible; that the date of the invasion was originally fixed for Oct. 7, a month before the election; and that it was changed only because the invasion forces could not be got ready by that date.

NOT ENOUGH TAXICABS

The city hall was picketed the other day by some people interested in increasing the number of taxicabs licensed for operation in Chicago. It seems that the present limit is 3,000, and the desire is to increase it to 3,500.

Certainly this town today has fewer cabs than it needs. Maybe many of the licensed cabs have fallen to pieces and replacements are not yet available. At any rate, for one reason or another, there aren't enough cabs to serve the community's requirements. If all the cabs now licensed are actually on the streets, then the case for increasing the total number is a good one. If the companies aren't operating all the cabs they are permitted to have the reasons for their failure ought to be examined.

WOODSMAN, SPARE THAT BATTLESHIP

The Navy League of the United States, composed of estimable gentlemen interested in the preservation of the battle fleet as what used to be called "the first line of the nation's defense," has taken up the cudgels against Mr. Truman's proposal to unify the army, navy, and air force. The new president of the league, Ralph Bard, was until recently undersecretary of the navy. Secretary Forrestal has felt constrained to order navy officers to abandon their opposition to consolidation unless called before congressional committees, so the Navy League has taken up the burden of defense.

Mr. Bard's criticism of the Truman plan shows the navy's fear that it will be consolidated out of existence, or, at least, be reduced to a transport or ferrying force for occupation troops and their necessary supplies after the air force, atomic weapons, and long range rockets have destroyed the enemy's capacity to resist. Mr. Bard's emphasis on organizational details disclosed that the navy is reluctant to consider the question of whether surface fleets are not already obsolete. By dodging the relevant issue, he only emphasized it.

It would seem that the weak spot in Mr. Truman's gospel of consolidation is that it really fails to consolidate. It consolidates the army and navy, but does not consolidate the marines with the army, altho the army's Rangers were specialized troops for amphibious operations in the same sense as the marines; and the army and marines, when once landed, must both fight as ground troops. Neither does the Truman plan require that the army and navy air forces be consolidated, altho their functions are bound to become almost indistinguishable in future wars.

Mr. Truman's reluctance to go the whole way on consolidation seems to indicate that his reservations are sops to conciliate the hurt feelings of the navy. Both he and the navy are hesitant to express the real doubt in their minds. That is whether a navy can exist or is needed in the day of long range aviation and atomic and rocket weapons. It seems to us that this is the real question to be explored, and that Mr. Truman has dodged it in calling for an end to further congressional examination of his proposals.

MacARTHUR FINISHES THE JOB

Gen. MacArthur has reported that his outline of political, social, and economic reform for Japan is now complete. He will issue no more major directives. It is now up to the Japanese, MacArthur said, to "digest the organic changes in their government" and to seize the opportunity given them to enjoy the personal and political liberties conferred upon them by the occupation after being withheld so long by the militarists.

MacArthur has done the job which was given to him in less than four months. It was on Sept. 2 that he signed the document which signified Japan's unconditional surrender in Tokyo bay. His statement on that occasion was the most hopeful that had ever been directed to the Japanese common people. It is worth recalling some of his words.

"The energy of the Japanese race, if properly directed, will enable expansion vertically rather than horizontally," said the general. "If the talents of the race are turned into constructive channels, the country can lift itself from its present deplorable state into a position of dignity. To the Pacific basin has come the vista of a new emancipated world. Today, freedom is on the offensive. Today, in Asia as well as in Europe, unshackled peoples are tasting the full sweetness of liberty, the relief from fear."

Some of our war time allies, with, to our shame, the support of the Washington government and the state department, have disabused Asiatics as they have Europeans of their hopes for freedom. It is, to a degree, ironic that the conquered nation of Japan should have emerged from the war with a greater endowment of liberty than it has ever known, while nations which fought by the side of this country and Britain and Russia should find their share of the triumph in the extinguishing of their liberties.

In less than four months MacArthur has taken tremendous burdens from the backs of the Japanese. He has rid the nation of its militarists, with their insane ambitions. He has eliminated state Shintoism which perverted religion into a cult of fanaticism demanding self-immolation in the cause of military megalomania. He has broken the tight hold of a few hereditary families over the economy of Japan. He has told the people that they can think as they wish, say what they think, and give political expression to their will. He has accomplished land reforms deferred for centuries. He has permitted the emperor to remain as a symbol, but has cut him down to size and demonstrated, in the arrest orders for Prince Konoye and others of the blood, that royal station is no excuse for abusing the people's trust. Whether the emperor remains is left to the decision of the Japanese electorate.

This record of accomplishment is astonishing when compared with the record of allied occupation rule in Germany, where, at the end of seven months, our gauleiters have reduced the nation to such anarchy and despair that there is no prospect of salvaging the situation unless we go back to the beginning and start all over again. We entered Germany with threats and the plan for a Draconian peace. We have offered the conquered none of the hope with which MacArthur made the people of Japan his allies rather than his nation's eternal enemies.

To MacArthur's record as one of America's greatest generals may now be added the promise that he will take rank as one of history's great statesmen. He has performed his task with wisdom and equanimity in the face of constant sniping. No untruth, however contemptible, was withheld if it could injure his reputation.

These canards were of New Deal origin. They were advanced even tho the administration could not dispense with MacArthur's great military and administrative talents. He was the indispensable man. The politicians who were compelled to avail themselves of his genius realized that his accomplishments endangered the myth of their own indispensability. They could not remove him, but they could turn the whole force of the administration smear machine to the purpose of lessening his reputation. MacArthur's record is all the answer that is required to expose his detractors as petty and envious men.

THEY SAW THE STAR

The Wise Men who brought gifts of gold, frankincense, and myrrh to the first Christmas were priests of an ancient Persian religion, Zoroastrianism, and therefore believers in a form of monotheism. Members of this priesthood were called Magi, and their influence in the pre-Christian era seems to have been extensive. Herodotus, Greek historian of the fourth century, B. C., gives a favorable account of them.

* * *

According to Herodotus, the Magi controled all religious observances in Persia, since they alone possessed the priestly mysteries for the worship of Mazda, who represented the divine power for good in Zoroastrian teachings. They were powerful in public and private affairs; they conducted the education of the young princes, and were in constant attendance upon the king as counselors. They were also soothsayers and interpreters of dreams; it is possible that some of their mystics were clairvoyant.

* * *

In the sacred writings of Zoroaster there is an eloquent description of a Magian:

"Thou shouldst call him priest, who sits the whole night thru and yearns for holy wisdom that enables man to stand upon death's bridge fearless and with happy heart, the wisdom whereby he attains the holy and glorious world of paradise."

* * *

The three Magi who followed the Star of Bethlehem because they had heard prophecies of the coming of a Messiah remained nameless for centuries. In medieval legends they became Gaspar [a representative of the black races], Melchior, and Balthasar, and their cult has centered in the cathedral of Cologne, where their bones are said to be entombed. The city itself died under shell fire a year ago, but the great minster lifts its towers above the ruins. We are wondering if an account will come over the wires tonight about the first post-war Christmas eve at the rich shrines of Cologne's "three kings."

CHRISTMAS COLORS

Red is for the gay poinsettia,
Holly berry, ribbon tied
Into a festive bow;
Children's cheeks and merry lips;
A fire burning low.

(Red is for the constant heart
Of One who lived and gladly died
That you and I might know
The power of His saving grace,
Because He loves us so.)

Green is for the laden tree,
The tinseled wreath upon the door,
The candles in a row;
Intriguing little packages,
And leaves of mistletoe.

(Green is for the gift of life,
The Manger where the Christ Child lay
Beneath a star's soft glow;
Green is for the fertile seed,
The grass beneath the snow.)

Prayer for Christmas

Lord, let the new-fallen peace of this Christmastide be white; endow it, the wide world over, with Thy blest benediction of snow.

Let it fall softly, now, with gentle healing on the heart of all mankind.

Let the clean gauze of its snowflakes bind up all nations' wounds.

Let its cold, crystal beauty benumb all sorrow and pain.

Spread its deep, downy blanket over the memories of little children, banishing horror and fear.

In the hush of its snowy silence, let vengeance and hate be stilled.

Give us a White Peace this Christmas, O Heavenly Father, that the lovely glisten of its snow may be, unto all mankind, as the gleam of the Bethlehem Star.

Monty

WE ASKED FOR IT

I'd like to catch a certain man
And wash his face with snow;
He sent "white Christmas" greetings
And it turned to five below.

May north winds whistle down his neck,
May goose flesh crawl his spine.
I hope his season's jolly—
And his feet are cold as mine!

Among the Christmas season publications in which this column takes a direct interest is "Forty Shillings," a book of poems by Ruth Crary, who recently amputated her last name, Clough, because people pronounced it in five different ways. Miss Crary, née Clough, is a real poet, in testimony of which the introduction by Donald Parsons says: "I like this book because thru its portals I glimpse a Muse, serene and sane, clad in flowing garments, who treads as a Muse should tread."

Three of Miss Crary's Line o' Type contributions are included in the 75 titles. James S. Decker, Prairie City, Ill., publisher.

[The Friend of the Yanks will answer questions of service men, veterans, and their dependents by mail if stamped envelope is sent to 435 N. Michigan av. The Tribune's veterans' bureau, 1 S. Dearborn st., Superior 0200, gives personal interviews.]

L. N. L. writes: "I understand the government has a plan to compensate the veteran for the difference between his present income and the wage he can expect to earn at the end of two years. My understanding is that the government will compensate up to $75 a month for married men and up to $50 for single men for the difference between present salary and the amount which he can expect at the end of two years. I work in the purchasing department of a corporation not engaged in any planned system of apprenticeship. Would I be eligible for this benefit? Would the government's portion of my income be subject to income taxes? Would any payment from the government be deducted from any future bonus?"

Part VIII. of the GI bill provides for payment up to $500 a year by the government for tuition, books, fees for veterans who are entitled to education, and a subsistence allowance of $50 for men without dependents and $75 for those with dependents. The allowance is payable when the veteran is taking a full time course. Veterans attending a course on a part time basis and those receiving pay for on-the-job training will receive such lesser allowance as the veterans' administrator may determine. If you are in training with a firm approved by the veterans' administration you may obtain a subsistence allowance, which, when added to your pay, does not make your income exceed the journeyman wage for the job. Any benefits received under the GI bill will be deducted from any future bonus as the law now stands.

THE ABUSED STOMACH

MANY individuals brag about possessing a cast-iron stomach. They claim to be able to eat practically anything without the slightest discomfort. In spite of this notion, certain edibles can irritate the inner lining without the knowledge of the owner. If we could see what goes on inside this structure we might be more careful of what is swallowed. It is probably just as well that we can't as some of our gastronomic pleasures might thus be curbed.

Until the gastroscope was invented it was impossible to watch these membranes at work. Approximately a century before the discovery of this device there lived a Canadian fur trapper by the name of Alexis St. Martin. This man had been shot thru the abdomen and was lucky enough to survive the ordeal. When the wound healed, a small portion of the organ was left exposed to the surface. This abnormality afforded his physician, William Beaumont, the rare opportunity of viewing the interior under various circumstances.

Alexis was not always pleased by these experiments but the surgeon was persistent and paid him well for his coöperation. The pair became famous, for as a result of their studies, valuable information was given to the world. In the end, the misfortune of Alexis was the gain of science.

On several occasions Beaumont was astounded by his findings. Following an alcoholic debauche the membrane was red, swollen, and dry. Now and then white spots were observed. Similar alterations arose after the ingestion of hot, spicy dishes. But, in spite of these irregularities, Alexis felt no discomfort. But most of us are not so fortunate and the gastric pouch will rebel when it is abused.

Any one, under certain conditions, can develop an acute gastritis. Shortly after consuming poisoned food we become nauseated, break out in a cold sweat, and begin to vomit. Should retching occur, the ejected material often contains blood streaked particles. The process may not stop when the stomach is empty as the whole intestinal tract seems to be reversed and bile appears. Palpitation, weakness, and an elevated temperature may be exhibited. Now and then there is an associated diarrhea.

Gastritis can also be produced by infection resulting in what is known popularly as "stomach flu." Overindulgence in alcohol and the swallowing of corrosive poisons bring on a similar group of symptoms.

Some individuals do not reach the stage of throwing up. Severe indigestion occurs and the best example is the child who suffers from colic after devouring green apples. Distress may follow voracious eating, especially when the meal contains considerable roughage or is poorly masticated. Here the use of antispasmodic drugs, such as belladonna or paregoric will relieve aching.

In general these acute flare-ups take care of themselves. When vomiting is present, neither food nor medication can be retained and complete abstinence is necessary for 12 to 24 hours. Occasionally chips of ice or small sips of water or milk are tolerated and aid in alleviating dryness or dehydration. After this period nutriment may be added and, by the third day, the regular menus can be resumed gradually. Agonizing cases may require hypodermic injections of an opiate or the administration of fluids into a vein.

STAY-AT-HOME

Mrs. A. M. writes: I know a mother who takes her 3 month old infant out only once a month, when she brings him to the doctor. What will come of this?

REPLY

The tot will probably become fretful and look pasty. Most pediatricians agree that fresh air not only stimulates but increases resistance. Many children tolerate frigid weather provided they are protected adequately. On the other hand, staying indoors at this age may not be harmful and will not necessarily bring on disease.

HERNIA AND PAIN

D. F. G. writes: Can a rupture cause pain in the chest?

REPLY

Hernias in the diaphragm can be responsible for distress in the chest, especially when the victim is in a recumbent position.

HET UP

B. G. writes: Is it possible to run a temperature during a state of anxiety?

REPLY

Yes, but be sure that other sources have been ruled out.

Two Trees

Today, on the eve of Christmas, there are in widely separated parts of Illinois two Christmas trees which in their different ways represent the spirit of selflessness which was divinely manifest in a manger 2,000 years ago. Both are the work of school children. One is in St. Elizabeth's hospital here. The other is in the Withers public library in Bloomington.

The Bloomington tree is all white. A star of peace crowns it. Other stars, hundreds of them blue, 150 of them gold, cover its branches. On each star is printed a name, that of the father or brother of a school child who, by his service in the war just past, helped the world to have peace today. A placard beside the tree states:

I am a Christmas tree! High, high
The Star of Peace I hold—
And cradled in my branches lie
The service stars of blue and gold.

O, Star of Peace, well do I know
These smaller stars of gold and blue
Combine their sacrificial glow
To beam illustriously in you.

So proudly, thankfully I shine
A glorious Christmas tree—Christ's tree.
O Star, no symbol more divine
Have I upheld since Calvary.

The other tree is green, and nobly so, for it stretches to a great height of 14 feet, almost three times the size of its donor, Hyman Ramis. Hyman is 18, but is only 5 feet 2, a fact attributable perhaps to the malnutrition of what are called the growing years, for he was only 12 that bitter fall of 1939 when he and his parents fled from Poland on the last outgoing boat to evade the nazi steel. He could speak no English at all when they reached Chicago. Now he speaks it without a trace of accent. He also speaks Polish, Russian, and Lithuanian.

It was three weeks ago that Hyman came to one of the teachers at Tuley high school here, where he is a senior. His deep set gray eyes black with intensity, he hesitantly asked what the school was going to do about a Christmas tree this year. The instructor replied, easily, that there'd be one all right, Hyman shouldn't worry about that. "But," said Hyman, "I want to give it." The instructor tried to hide his astonishment. He knew that Hyman is paying his own way thru school, as well as helping support his parents by a part time job with a produce firm, that he has done this since he was 14. "Yes," said Hyman, "I want to give it to show I am grateful for what the American schools have done for me. They have made me," joyously, "an American."

He brought the tree. It was a magnificent balsam, towering, conical, and in perfect symmetry. He directed its installation, helped decorate it with shining ornaments made in the art classes. "Just to watch him as he watched it was a wonderful thing," the instructor said later. "His great joy at being a part of all that America offers to youth was beautiful. I never saw a kid more pleased over anything."

The tree first was used at a school Christmas dance, then at every assembly. Finally came the day when school adjourned for the Christmas holidays. Hyman was asked if he didn't want to take the tree home. "O, no," he said quickly. "I am a Jew. We don't have a tree. But —" again he hesitated. "Couldn't it go some place where a lot of people need a tree? Where it would make a lot of people happy?"

And that is how the tree happens to be glowing in St. Elizabeth's hospital today.

At This Season, Too

It is too bad about the village of Dolton. Its faith in human nature seems to be sadly lacking. We base this solely on a clipping from the Dolton Pointer, which says: "A Christmas party will be held at this time. Everyone is asked to bring a $1 gift for the grab bag. Please leave the price tag on."

FEWER HOMES FOR VETS

Chicago, Dec. 20—Present proposed building legislation will accomplish nothing other than producing less homes for the veterans in the first six months of 1946, than were built in this nation during the last six months of 1945. Diverting half of materials to homes under $10,000, and permitting the balance of materials to flow into other forms of construction, discloses a lack of knowledge of building industry on the part of those sponsoring a plan that borders on the unbelievable.

There are not sufficient building mechanics in the United States at present time to service one-fourth of present construction. Placing a ceiling on homes of $10,000 or less, and no ceilings on other forms of construction, will automatically draw in the latter field all available mechanics.

Industries, commercial firms, etc., with large reserve funds will pay any price, no matter how exorbitant, to complete quickly their alterations, additions, etc. Small homes construction, smothered with ceilings, will cease.

If the boys at Washington are sincere in their avowed intention to create more homes for returning veterans, here are suggestions that will unravel present building chaos, only to the extent of quickly producing a great number of small homes in a short period of time:

1. Stop immediately issuing permits for both remodeling and new construction of all commercial work, factories, industries, automobile agencies, churches, gasoline stations, race track additions, tavern alterations, schools, restaurant enlargements, and public improvements of all types.
2. Halt immediately the disgraceful, self-crucifying program of monthly shipping to England and other cry baby nations, tens of millions of dollars of vital building materials, such as lumber, plumbing, etc., now urgently needed at home to provide shelter for returning veterans.
3. Shake loose from his dictatorial trance that magnificent confusionist Chester Bowles, whose arbitrary price ceilings on hundreds of necessary building materials has successfully swept clean the shelves of all supply houses. Immediately step up prices on those necessary materials to the etxent that the manufacturer can quickly return them to the shelves of the supply houses with some semblance of profit.

STARTING DOWN THE TOBOGGAN

Chicago, Dec. 2—The modern Gibbon, who is doubtless already at work on the "Decline and Fall of the Republic of the United States of America," has probably not decided on the exact time when the collapse became inevitable. But he will probably fix the date as on the day when hoodlums in picket lines first discovered that they could bar business heads from their own property and not be jailed for it.

"HARD TERMS"

Chicago, Dec. 14—I get so sick of reading about Great Britain and Churchill moaning about the "hard terms" the United States is demanding for a loan of a paltry four billion four hundred million. What do England or Churchill care what the terms are? If they run true to form, they will not pay either the interest or the principal, so why bellyache about the terms?

REDS ARE YELLOW

Chicago, Dec. 12—On Sunday, Dec. 9, Catholics of Croatian extraction held a conference in Chicago under the auspices of our Catholic Croatian clergy. All Croatian clubs, lodges, and societies were invited to send delegates. The purpose for which this conference was called was accomplished 110 per cent, that is, all Catholic Croatians of America were brought under one banner and for one purpose: Denunciation of the Red terror in Croatia.

This meeting also was by way of being a protest against the atrocities being committed against our people and clergy under Marshal Tito's Red flag in Yugoslavia. Rumors flew thick and fast that the local Commies were going to break up the gathering by force. Our pastor asked for a few police officers to be present. The Commies came and sent an advance scout into the hall. One look and out he flew into the car idling at the curb. "No dice, boys," he said, "the place is lousy with cops." I think Commies should have the word yellow substituted for Red. That is more their true color. M. A.

LOOK INTO YOUR HEARTS

Chicago, Dec. 18—Last year I sat knitting for the Red Cross while listening to all the fine Christmas music that seemed to pour forth from any station I happened to turn on. Everybody [or supposedly so] was praying for the peace this sin sick world was looking forward to. Now that we have what we want, we forget that Christmas is a Christian holiday, and that we should observe the birth of the Prince of Peace with reverence and thanksgiving and not only with outward display for commercial benefits.

Again I sit and knit sweaters for the Red Cross, but in vain do I try to get what I hunger for, the good old Christmas carols. No wonder world conditions are what they are because we do not have the spirit of it in our hearts and Christmas is only a commercial affair.

She weighs 89 pounds and is slowly starving to death. Imagine, in the American zone! I am not allowed to send her anything—no food, no clothing, no money. 1. If the title is covered by a guarantee policy, the seller would pay the cost of bringing the title company's examination down to show title clear in the seller's name and the buyer would pay subsequent costs.
2. It is common to split this 50-50 but it could be agreed either way.

Peggy Ware's Engagement Is Told at Party

BY JUDITH CASS

At least one of the city's gay pre-Christmas gatherings was given for a reason other than that of introducing a debutante to society, for at a cocktail party on Saturday in the Casino club news of romantic interest was of first importance. The party was given by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ware of Oak Park to announce the engagement of their daughter, Peggy, to Archibald Huntington Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Allen of Chicago. Because of the recent death of Mr. Allen's grandmother, Mrs. Charles Bonner, their marriage next Saturday willl be a quiet one in the Ware home, with only the families present. Mr. Allen and his bride will go to Montana to live on Miss Ware's Flaming Arrow ranch, near Livingston.

Miss Ware, who was graduated from the Masters school at Dobbs Ferry and Finch Junior college, returned from Montana 10 days ago. Christened Elizabeth, the pretty bride-to-be has been a board member of the Chicago Junior league, and during the war years worked to supply war materials from her father's plant. Her brother, Lt. Gordon Ware, is stationed with the army in Detroit, but is in Chicago until after the wedding.

Mr. Allen recently returned after five years overseas with the Canadian army as a commando. He was a captain when he received his discharge about a month ago. He is a graduate of the Boys' Latin school and of the University of Chicago.

The Rev. Thomas Rogers, assistant rector of the Church of the Holy Spirit in Lake Forest, and a cousin of the bridegroom, will read the wedding service. Miss Ethelyn Dulin of Pasadena, Miss Ware's Dobbs Ferry roommate, will be her only attendant, and Maj. Crawford Duncan of the marines will be best man.

Other Engagements

At a tea at home in Harper av. yesterday, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Valentine Merrill of the University of Chicago announced the engagement of their daughter, Dania Valentine, to Herbert Daniel Brewster, son of the Rev. and Mrs. James Riggs Brewster of Boston, Mass. The wedding will take place Jan. 19.

Miss Merrill is a graduate of Kemper Hall and attended Carleton college and the University of Chicago, from which she received her degree last March. She was appointed as an analyst in the department of state last July, and has been living in Washington, D. C. Mr. Brewster, who came on from Washington to spend the holidays with the Merrills, has served for five years in the diplomatic service in Greece and Turkey, and at present is on duty as a foreign service officer assigned to the department of state. He was born in Greece and attended Phillips academy and Wesleyan university. His parents are with the American Board of Missions in Athens, Greece.

At an open house yesterday Mr. and Mrs. Robert Davidson Cunningham of Evanston announced the engagement of their daughter, June, to Lt. Claude Hollis Hogan Jr. of the naval reserve, son of Mr. Hogan of Stockton, Cal., and the late Mrs. Hogan. Miss Cunningham was graduated from Northwestern. Her fiance will return to the study of law at Yale university when he is released from the navy. He was gunnery officer aboard the U. S. S. Baldwin.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Poole of Franconia, N. H., and New York have announced the engagement of their daughter, Mrs. Henry Robert Lanchester, to James Pallister Ward of Weymouth, England. Mrs. Lanchester, who attended Miss Chapin's school, Farmington, and Bennington college, was married to Mr. Lanchester in 1940 in England. He was killed in 1941 while a bomber pilot with the royal air force. Since then Mrs. Lanchester and her small son have lived with her parents. Mr. Ward is an executive officer in the British mercantile service stationed in India.

Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Van Nostrand of Babylon, N Y., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Mary Elizabeth, to Ensign Donald Wickett Huszagh of the navy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph D. Huszagh of Winnetka. Miss Van Nostrand is a senior at Connecticut college. Ensign Huszagh was graduated from the United States Naval academy with the accelerated class of 1946, and is stationed at the submarine base in New London, Conn. Debutante News

Last minute arrivals among the avalanche of holiday debut invitations were the cheerful red and white cards inviting friends of Mr. and Mrs. Griffith Mark and Mrs. Mark's daughter, Miss Janet Moore, to the latter's debut tea from 5 to 7 p. m. today in the Mark's home in Northfield. Assisting Miss Moore will be two of her Sarah Lawrence classmates, Miss Charlotte Hannaford and Miss Mari Bahe, and Miss Grace Williams.

Mrs. George Carolan will entertain at luncheon today in the Indian Hill club for Miss Bahe.

The green and white motif used on the invitations which Mr. and Mrs. James Clark Hoskins and their daughter, Miss Jamee Clare Hoskins, sent out for a debut tea-dance from 4 to 7 p. m. today in the Racquet club will be repeated in the decorations for today's party. The bud will carry a bouquet made from an assortment of 36 variegated orchids which are being sent to her by a family friend, Julio Gerlein Comelin of Barranquilla, Colombia. He is a cousin of the Colombian consul in Chicago, Carlos Gerlein.

Other Events Today

Christmas carols will echo thru the streets of Winnetka starting at 7:30 o'clock tonight, indicating that the pupils and graduates of the North Shore Country Day school are on their annual round of Christmas eve singing. After the tour the group will drop into Mrs. Walter A. Strong's home for refreshments and a final chorus of carols. For some of the group the evening will end in the home of Mrs. Edith Sackett Howard, who with her sons, Lt. Comdr. Hubert Howard Jr., Lt. John A. Howard, and Apprentice Seaman Charles N. Howard, are entertaining for debutante Carolyn Kuehnle. Comdr. Howard and Lt. Howard are out of the service after overseas duty, while their brother is at home from his navy V-12 course at Dartmouth college.

The "house-trailer-warming" party that the Louis F. Swifts are giving tonight may be more than a christening party for the trailer in which they will start an extended southern and western trip two days after Christmas, for the gathering may be their farewell to Wheaton. When the Swifts, their 9 year old son, and their dog and cat set out Thursday in the 27 foot trailer they will be looking for a new home in the west, and if their mission is successful they will come back to Wheaton merely to pack. On the journey they will visit Mr. Swift's brother-in-law, James Minotto, and his children, Mrs. George S. Walker, and Demetrius Minotto, who all live near Phoenix, Ariz.

Mrs. Paul L. Armstrong is giving a small luncheon today in the Indian Hill club for her niece, Miss Virginia Armstrong, daughter of the Horace M. Armstrongs of Wilmette, who is home from Mills college for the holidays.

Members of the Tavern club are permitted to invite one guest each to the club's annual wassail bowl party from 5 to 7 p. m. today around the Christmas tree in the lounge. Eggnogs, Tom and Jerrys, and snacks will be served.

White Collar GIRL

BY RUTH MAC KAY

Reveille

If you don't see evidence of the military motif thruout the holiday scene, then consider the small girl who edged up to Santa Claus at Carson Pirie Scott & Co. the other day. She wanted a bugle—to get her mother up in the morning.

Tax and Tacks

One woman shopper became so bewildered by the Christmas rush at Mandel Brothers that she inquired of the elevator starter, "What floor is the basement?" Another customer had her feet firmly on the ground. In fact, she was buying some carpeting, for which the salesperson told her the tax would be $8. The lady all but swooned. "Eight dollars!" she shrieked, "Why, for that I'd buy the tacks myself!"

The Arctic Gentleman

Even Santa Claus has been "sweating it out." True to his north pole background—and owing to his heavy velveteen costume—one State st. store Santa kept flinging open the window. The white collar girls in the section kept slamming it down. Either Santa Claus was too warm—or they were too cold. The feud reached white heat during the near zero weather.

All That Glitters

In Tribune Tower the copy girls on the fourth floor demonstrated that all that glitters is not gold. In the absence of ornaments to decorate a small, symmetrical Christmas tree, the girls made chains of shiny paper clips, hung brand new white erasers with gleaming metal trim, and at the base of the tree used crumpled copy paper held in place by glue pots. Very cute.

The Passing Show

The girls who sell theater tickets at Marshall Field's are still puzzling over the bemused out-of-towner who dashed in last week to say she wanted two seats for "The Merry Windows."

Christmas Eavesdropping

The boys in the package room of the Palmer House have been busier than Donder and Blitzen this season. The reason: They are wrapping Christmas packages as a service to guests. More than 2,000 packages had been firmly tied at the last report. . . . All is harmony where a few weeks ago there was dissonance over at the main Bell building on Washington st. If you want to glimpse a friendly scene, take a peek at the telephone operators around the big Christmas tree in the lobby singing carols to the tune of an electric organ. . . . Perhaps you noticed a pretty girl tripping gaily thru the loop with an armful of small Christmas trees the other day. It may have been a certain United Air Lines stewardess who expects to spend Christmas in the sky. She was picking up little gadgets for her passengers who won't get home in time for Christmas. The stewardesses, by the way, love these holiday flights. . . . For the first time in many years the Chicago Public library will be closed Christmas eve, and Chicago will lack one of its most serene sights—the bent head of Librarian H. J. Grubb as he opens his copy of "Christmas Carol" and silently begins to read, "Marley was dead, to begin with. There is no doubt about that. . . ."

Needs Are Told of Family of 7 in Empty Flat

[Sally Joy Brown activities are sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.]

BY SALLY JOY BROWN

The following case was directed to our attention by a social worker, and we hope that requested articles will be found among our readers' usable discards.

Mrs. M. is a young mother of five children, two girls, 6 and 1½ years old, and boys 4, 2½ years, and 4 months old, living in an almost empty, poorly heated rear flat in a congested south side area. Her husband is an ex-service man, medically discharged, whose employment upon release from service was delayed because of the illness of his wife, their baby, now hospitalized, and his mother. Before moving to the present address, the family either lived with relatives or had known only the precarious habitation of shabby, furnished rooms. They can use all kinds of household furniture and equipment, but their most immediate requirements are a coal or oil heating stove, one double bed, one small and two large size cribs, a buggy, bedding, rugs, and a few odd chairs. Transportation can be arranged most economically and conveniently for south side offers.

Two Christmas Favorites Are Well Presented

BY ALBERT GOLDBERG

Should all other signs and portents fail, the music reviewer would recognize the Christmas season by discovering Handel's "Messiah" and Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel" doing their seasonal duty in concert hall and opera house. Yesterday afternoon the two perennials came into head-on conflict, with the Swedish Choral club singing its annual "Messiah" at Orchestra hall, and "Hansel and Gretel" delighting a house full of youngsters at the Civic Opera house—a situation in which the reviewer's problem was not eased by a 35 minute late start of the opera.

But "Hansel and Gretel" finally got under way—the company's luggage was said to have been delayed in transit—after a prologue in which Santa Claus, after advance heralding on the loud speaker, popped out from behind the velvet curtain, a la Tonio in "Pagliacci," and promised his youthful constituents that they were going to hear the best performance ever staged. He further held up the business of the day by leading an impatient audience in community singing. The old ogre was scheduled to make it up to the boys and girls, however, by distributing lollipops after the show.

Not caring to lower Santa Claus' stock still further, we will not, on the brief sample that time permitted hearing, take issue with him on the thesis that this was the world's best performance. It did seem, on the strength of the first act and a part of the second, to be a very good one.

The new amplification system had a bit too much of the old Christmas spirit in the first act, so that the women's voices sometimes sounded like shrieking Valkyries, but after that the system, or its operator, subsided to an amiable normal. Eunice Steen Lamont and Maria Matyas were a frolicsome pair as Hansel and Gretel, singing brightly and pursuing each other thru the beloved routine as if they thoroly enjoyed their jobs. A good deal of what they sang was perfectly intelligible, tho they did not in this respect quite reach the remarkably high standards of Doris Doe as the mother and George Tozzi as the father.

Miss Doe, in fact, was about as good a mother as the local stage has ever observed, and the same can centainly apply to Mr. Tozzi's singing, which is resonant, robust, and pleasant. But his acting is still a bit too self-conscious to be thoroly professional, and he would do well to ease up on the details of papa's inebriation. Felix Wolfes conducted smoothly if not excitingly, and the program further listed the names of May Barron as the witch, Mary Kampo as the Sandman, and Annette Olsen as the Dewfairy.

The Swedish Choral club's annual "Messiah" is easily the most majestic episode on the resident music calendar. Harry T. Carlson and his singers are so imbued with both the letter and the spirit of Handel's incomparable work that each year they contrive to make the current performance seem better than the last one, even tho the previous one in its day seemed tops.

Yesterday the chorus had gained in solidity and stability by the return of many of its tenors and basses, a virile and valiant lot of singers who sail thru the complexities of "All we like sheep have gone astray" and "Lift up your heads, O, ye gates" in a fashion to equal the long famous brilliance of the sopranos and altos. And the Swedish Choral's "Hallelujah" chorus, for all the finical exception one might take to Mr. Carlson's variations of tempo, is still one of the dependable musical thrills.

The soloists, as much as we heard of them, did their work well: William Miller, tenor, sang with dignity and clarity; Maude Nosler's fluting soprano did calm justice to "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth"; Lillian Chookasian's sympathetic alto was right for "He was despised," and John MacDonald's splendid Handelian flare came to the fore in "Why do the nations so furiously rage?" and "The Trumpet Shall Sound," the latter profiting from Gerald Huffman's brilliant trumpet playing. Members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra played much better than average accompaniments.

It's That Final Day; Here Are Last Gift Ideas

BY REA SEEGER

Gift certificates and checks, the last resort of the baffled "can't find a thing that's suitable" shoppers, are to be remembered this final day of the big rush. Every shop and store will obligingly fill out a very decorative gift certificate for a desired amount. The lucky recipient can, after Christmas, when everything is quiet, select a special "something" he has longingly appraised for weeks. The gift is not only a boon to last minute shoppers, but most welcome to the person who receives it.

Specialty shops and department stores have strategically placed booths, in easy-to-find spots, where you can hand over your money in exchange for the slips of valuable paper. Sports shops for men also feature this service before Christmas, so women shoppers who are uncertain about buying sports clothes or equipment can send the certificates.

Don't forget your florist this last day for buying. Even tho these same florists urged early ordering, they still have supplies of Christmas greens, plants, and cut flowers to be sent as gifts, or tucked in boxes to be delivered personally tonight or tomorrow. Good floral ideas include boxes or corsage arrangements of Chicago grown carnations.

Taylor One Christmas, Fridolin the Next, And Dowling Looks Like Santa Claus

Except that he lacked the reindeer to bring him out from New York for last night's Studebaker opening, I would begin to suspect that Eddie Dowling represents the theatrical branch of that fine old firm, Santa Claus. For the man who last Christmas brought us Laurette Taylor in "The Glass Menagerie" of fabulous renown has sent us Fridolin in "St. Lazare's Pharmacy." The new play has no Tennessee Williams—it lacks the superb emotional tension of his theater writing—but it is a warm, gentle, leisurely and delightful reason for going to the theater, expertly acted with a true flair for ensemble and beautifully staged in a dream pharmacy created by Jo Mielziner, Mr. Dowling's co-wizard in the theater world of light and shadow.

In this wonderful old French Canadian drug store with its wealth of apothecary jars, its ancient scales, its glowing globes of red and green, its bleached counters and shelves looking out thru the curved window into the street where fall daylight and dusk, sunshine and snow, and sometimes sunshine falling thru snow — which where I come from means the devil is whipping his wife — in this wonderful old drug store you will discover some of the best acting of many a season. You will find the delicate earnestness of Miriam Hopkins, the magnetic power of Herbert Berghof, the warm, womanly quality of Huguette Oligny, the picturesque pose of Henri Letondal, the simplicity of Somer Alberg as the grave digger, but in the end you will find yourself talking about Fridolin.

And who is Fridolin? He is the French-Canadian favorite who from now on will be an American favorite, too. Known more formally as Gratien Gelinas, he is a wise, wizened wisp of an actor with a monkey face, catlike relaxation and fluid, easy gestures, or so you think until he reappears as a tightly strung, narrow shouldered, astigmatic and kindly drudge. But whatever he is, he has a droll personality to arrest attention and the ability to hold it.

The play itself is the tale of two rebellious generations impatient to free themselves from the ancient pharmacy and to reach a larger life outside. The restless young pharmacist is about to leave and his young wife is about to let him go when a visitor arrives who knows everything about the place from where the anise drops are kept to how the teakettle behaves in the kitchen. When the light fades and rises again, the shop and the woman have slipped back 30 years in memory to the time when she threatened to leave and for want of the right gesture made, the right word spoken, her husband let her go. Remembering, she does what she can to tell the son who thinks her dead that happiness is not around the corner, but in the heart, and she gives his wife some practical advice which seems to work, at least long enough for a wryly happy ending.

Rather a simple fable, this, a little garrulous at times and slowed at the start by a brief and banal prologue, but on the whole an entertaining play with some nuggets of wisdom and sometimes an acute piece of writing. It seems to me, for example, a curiously vivid phrase to use of a woman who lost happiness by trying to pursue it to say she was killed in a railroad accident. The best of Miriam Hopkins' performance keys her gray visitors to that ghostly line, which is somehow the truer in that the woman of whom it is said is at least alive enough to be hurt by it.

"ST. LAZARE'S PHARMACY"

Overexciting Holiday Often Harms Baby

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

If your son or daughter is old enough to sense Christmas, but is still very young—2, 3, 4, or even 5—here are some suggestions, which, if heeded, will add to their fun and their well being for the great day and the ones right after it:

Don't let their routine get all shot to pieces. I don't mean rush them off to bed on Christmas eve so they haven't time to savor the occasion. But start their bath and the hanging up of stockings and such things early enough so they can calm down and get to bed in good season, with perhaps time to sing a carol, or hear the Christmas story.

On Christmas day let them have goodies but the kind that are not too rich. Certainly don't let them eat everything and anything on the dinner table, in boxes, or in the kitchen.

Be sure that they are abstracted from festivities and their entrancing new toys to take a nap or a long rest in a quiet spot. Also bundle them into their outdoor things and let them get some play and fresh air.

All this doesn't mean that they can't participate in the fun, talk, and games. You don't need to make a fuss about your precautions. Just keep an eye on them and manage quietly.

We hope you are all surrounded by the people you love best. We hope, too, that if your men aren't home yet you can face the sad fact with courage, even with gayety, so that those who are home can enjoy their day to the fullest. No woman is so beloved by her friends and her family as the woman who refuses to be dreary when the going is rough.

We hope Santa Claus is good to all of you, with practical things and some excitingly frivolous things, too.

We hope you can all look in your mirrors and say, "Well, the old girl doesn't look a bit bad today!" It will add a lot to your enjoyment of the day if you know, down in your heart, that you're looking rather special and that pride in the way you look gives your family a little extra glow of tribal satisfaction. It does, you know. Your small son may not say so, but in years to come the way his mother looked on Christmas will be imprinted on his mind. On your husband's, too. This is a day to look memorably "right" when we would wish for all of you that you look and feel memorably "right."

In other words, what we're trying to say is just "Merry Christmas."

ELEANOR NANGLE.

ANSWERS TO SATURDAY'S QUIZ

Q. 1—As South you hold:

♠94 ♥K9763 ♦76 ♣A952

The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 spade	Pass	2 spades	Double
Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Four hearts. A bid of only three hearts would be grossly inadequate, and would almost surely oblige partner to quit. After all he has forced you to speak and as far as he can tell you may have nothing at all but length in hearts. If he is willing to compel you to bid at the level of three tho you may have little or nothing, there should be no doubt as to your ability to make four, because you have two tricks more than he had any reason to expect.

Q. 2—As South you hold:

♠952 ♥AK3 ♦754 ♣10984

The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 spade	Pass	2 diamonds	Pass
2 spades	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Pass. Partner has made a penalty double. If it was his desire to have you bid at the level of three he would surely have made a take-out double the first time around. He was simply waiting for them to get up high enough and you have a hand that will be of considerable assistance defensively. It is evident that East must have opened a light hand and that West may have committed an error in keeping the bidding open.

Q. 3—Partner opens one spade and you hold:

♠K1093 ♥K4 ♦K642 ♣1073

What is your response?

A.—Two spades. This is a good substantial raise and you make it with the hope that partner will be able to scare up another bid in which case you will go on to game. But on the other hand it is not strong enough to justify any more drastic action. If partner fails to act again it is extremely doubtful that a game will be missed.

Q. 4—As South you hold:

♠— ♥KQJ1094 ♦QJ74 ♣Q108

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 spade	Double	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Two spades. You surely will refuse to settle for less than a game in hearts and there may be a chance for slam if partner's values are in just the right spots. In view of your previous pass partner will hardly visualize your enormous power unless you first advise of the void in spades and then follow up with a jump bid in hearts.

Q. 5—As North you hold:

♠QJ ♥AQ102 ♦AJ53 ♣KQ4

The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 spade	Pass	2 spades	Double
Pass	3 hearts	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Pass. You forced partner to bid three hearts and he may have no strength at all. You have no assurance that you can make three hearts much less a game.

Q. 6—As South you hold:

♠KJ95 ♥J94 ♦J10763 ♣K

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 diamond	Pass	1 spade	Pass
2 clubs	Pass	2 diamonds	2 hearts
3 clubs	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Four diamonds. This may at first blush appear somewhat drastic. But a certain latitude should be permitted this hand in view of the fact that no forward move has yet been made. The one over one response promised very little and this followed by a mere preference in the return to two diamonds. When partner now goes out of his way to show that he has two five card minors the hand appears to fit better and you should indicate that you have a good raise. If partner is very short in hearts this may induce him to go to game. If not he is at liberty to pass the four diamond bid.

Q. 7—As South you hold:

♠62 ♥J1053 ♦72 ♣AK942

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 heart	Pass	2 clubs	Pass
2 diamonds	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Two hearts. Some may take issue with this bid on the ground that it is a mere preference bid and therefore does not do justice to the hand. However, sight must not be lost of the fact that you have indicated a reasonably good hand by taking out into the two level. Partner should realize that your hand has merit, otherwise you would have made an immediate raise to two hearts instead of taking pains to bid the clubs. If partner has a good hand he will speak again. A jump to three hearts would be unsound because it would guarantee a game, which you are not in a position to do.

Q. 8—You are South, vulnerable, and hold:

♠10864 ♥96532 ♦A7 ♣82

The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 club	1 diamond	2 clubs	Pass
Pass	2 spades	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Three spades. Partner must have a good hand to compete when vulnerable against two bidding opponents with a passing partner. He was prepared to have you go back to three diamonds if necessary. The chances are that he refused to double because he was not interested in hearing about hearts which he suspected that you had.

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Dec. 23—Hal Wallis tells me Virginia Field has been added to "The Perfect Marriage," which stars Loretta Young and David Niven. The cameras won't roll till next month. However, so David will have a chance to digest the parties being thrown for him. Eddie Goulding is giving the biggest, with 200 males and nary a female invited. The girls are sizzling. Sam Goldwyn is cracking out with a luncheon for David Wednesday. When he arrived in New York and found a huge basket of fruit from Hal Wallis, David wired: "After eating my way thru that, I'm one big vitamin pill." . . . Elizabeth Taylor will represent Hollywood at the White House Jan. 7 on the special broadcast for the March of Dimes campaign. Mrs. Harry Truman, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Cornelia Otis Skinner, and Elizabeth will speak over a national hookup. The request for Elizabeth came not from Hollywood but from the White House. I know of no one here better fitted for the job. . . . Lt. Col. Jack Votion, just back from three years' war service, has been appointed European representative for R. K. O. He'll have headquarters in London and will operate between there, Paris, and Hollywood. Also he'll be R. K. O.'s chief talent scout. Jack has been decorated by four countries for his work with the army. When R. K. O. picked him, it picked the tops.

Snowed In and Snowed Out

Paulette Goddard phoned from New York that Burgess Meredith is out of the hospital. Merle Oberon and her husband are snowed in at Paulette's upstate home, and that means she and Burgess are snowed out. But there's food enough in the house to keep 'em happy for two weeks. Burgess will come here with Paulette Jan. 10 to start "Brave New World." . . . "Sinbad the Sailor," starring Doug Fairbanks Jr., gets practically the same cast that R. K. O. gave "The Spanish Main." Paul Henreid is out, and Luba Malina from New York's "Marinka" is in. So far, Doug has only this one deal in Hollywood. . . . Shorty, a St. Charles spaniel, carries a whole love scene in "Three Little Girls in Blue." You can't see the lovers, and audiences will have to figure out how the woo is progressing by watching the dog's action. Shorty has his own stand-in—a stuffed pooch.

Maybe It's Worth It

Sam Wood has offered Errol Flynn $85,000 for his book, "Showdown." . . . Paul Mantz is doing a book on what happened while he was piloting famous people to get married. He calls it "Honeymoon Express." . . . Belita and her mother are off to England and a tour with "Suspense." . . . Trem Carr gave Belita a new contract with a fat advance in salary before she left. . . . Clark Gable expects to be in New York when "Adventure" opens. He already has got himself suite-ed at the Waldorf. . . . Mrs. Porter Hall phoned to say that Porter won't have to have plastic surgery done on his face even tho his nose and jaw were broken in that automobile accident. He'll be out of the hospital and home for Christmas. . . . Jinx Falkenburg, reporting for work with a temperature of 102, was ordered home by the Columbia physician. That means her picture will have a 16 rather than a 15 day shooting schedule.

A Little of This and That

The recent big snowstorm in New York chilled the romance between Bob Walker and Florence Prichett. . . . Franz Waxman, and not David Rose, does the musical score for "Humoresque." . . . Harry Gold has gone to New York to arrange a world-wide film exchange for Howard Hughes. . . . England's Ashley Cowan has been added to the cast of "Cluny Brown." . . . Jackie Coogan's mother is coaching Ronnie Rolf, who'll do revivals of the early Coogan stories. I don't remember her doing that for Jackie. . . . When Warners bought "Turquoise" for $200,000, David Selznick got mad. He wanted that story. . . . Robert Worth and Starlet Connie Wieler are altar bound—if she's willing. . . . Robert Golden is flickering with Lloyd Bacon for the story of his father, Frank Bacon. If the deal goes thru, Lloyd will direct, of course. . . . Margaret Webster is here on business for the Theater Guild. . . . Did you know that every producer on the Twentieth Century lot turned down "Leave Her to Heaven," except George Jessel. Then he didn't get to make it. . . . Ozzie Nelson says the purpose of a good education is to enable one to get into more expensive trouble.

Russian Film Depicts War's Effect on Child

"ONCE THERE WAS A GIRL"

Produced by Artkino, directed by Victor Eisimont, featuring Nina Ivanova, Ada Voytsik, Leda Shtykan, Nikolai Korn, Natasha Zashipina, Vera Altaiskaya, Alex Larinov. Presented at the World Playhouse.

By Mae Tinée

This new Russian film is not a "once upon a time" fairy tale, but the sad story of children in the midst of war. It's a sharp reminder of the millions of youngsters all over the world who are hungry or cold or crippled or orphaned as a result of it. If you have a heart, you'll be touched by the film and grateful that our children have been spared such suffering, thanks to the men who crossed the oceans and died to keep war from our shores.

Both the director and the script writer responsible for this film must know children well, the story is handled with an acute perception of their natural reactions, and both the little girls about whom the story revolves give wonderfully natural performances.

Little Nina Ivanova has an appealing face, and her acting is sensitive. Her Nastenka is a normal child who appears to be about 7 or 8 years of age, but a youngster grown old in the ways of war. She knows what encirclement means . . . she lived in Leningrad. She knows about hunger—note the scene in which some scarce and precious bread is unwrapped, how carefully she gathers the scattered crumbs with her bony little fingers before removing the loaf. She knows about artful fibs to try to encourage her worried and sick mother. When she falls asleep staring wearily into the flame of the single candle that lights the air raid shelter, she dreams of a Christmas in the past when there was warmth and music and security, and when Santa appears he brings not toys or candy, but a letter from her missing soldier father.

Her playmate is Katia, probably 4 or 5, a gay and plump little thing with a winning personality, as portrayed by Natasha Zashipina, who displays a great deal of baby charm.

The fortunes of war eventually bring the children together in an orphanage, and the scenes in which they revisit their former homes, the younger miss in search of her beloved doll, the elder seeking a picture of her dead mother, are skilfully and movingly handled. There are also occasional flashes of childish humor which help to lighten the sad little story.

The entire cast is an able one, and if you want to be doubly grateful for the gifts of peace and security, I advise you to see it.

"With Bated Breath" . . . . By Alice Campbell

(Copyright: 1945: By Mrs. Alice Ormond Campbell)

SYNOPSIS: Avis Marriott accepts a job as companion-housekeeper to Maud and Erica Bolles, wealthy spinsters. Maud, a local autocrat, known for her charities, has grown penurious in her home. Erica, a semi-invalid, is dominated by Maud. Robin Grier, Maud's godson; Mrs. Olive Marks, a widow and family connection, and an evacuee family live with them at Turrets, an isolated English manor with an abandoned underground passage. Dr. Bruce advises Avis not to accept the position. Her predecessor, Agatha Trimble, left under a cloud, suspected of theft. Oscar Moravian arrives on Erica's invitation. The soldier husband in the evacuee family falls downstairs to his death. Wax is found on the stairs. Did some one want to kill Erica? Maud has been trying to have Erica judged mentally incompetent. Avis narrowly escapes death when a bullet penetrates her hat. After receiving a letter from Agatha, Maud is greatly upset. She claims an attempt was made on her life, her keys were used, a pistol was taken from her desk, and her liquor drugged. Erica had visited the wine cellar and Moravian was seen searching Maud's desk. Agatha's body is found in the tunnel. She had warned Erica against Moravian. However, Moravian persuades Erica to elope with him the next day. Some one besides Avis hears their plans. Olive's husband, if alive, would fall heir to the Bolles estate should both sisters die without wills. Again a shot misses Avis and grazes Bruce's shoulder. Erica's body is found in the ravine. Evidence is strong against Maud. Robin confesses to the three murders, obviously to shield Maud. Agatha's luggage is missing. Maud claims she did not wear the shoes that are covered with sooty grime. The inspector questions Olive, asks Moravian about his planned elopement, and searches for a will.

INSTALMENT XLIII.

DISTRAUGHT

Cheltenham, reached by train, was as yet ignorant of what had happened at Turrets. Mr. Aston-Butt, vicar of St. Botolph's, viewed the Yard inspector with chilly distaste.

"The late Miss Trimble, inspector? I was acquainted with her, yes. A most regrettable affair. She did come to me with her absurd and slanderous rigmarole of persecution. Miss Trimble's friends? I can name only one, Miss Alicia Harding, who shared a flat with Miss Enid Trimble, now dead. Miss Harding and Miss Enid, the sister, were both bookkeepers in the South Midlands bank."

A tour of the Cheltenham banks was a primary object. By starting with the South Midlands, Headcorn felt he might be killing two birds with one stone. He spotted Alicia Harding at once, the only woman employed there, but not wishing to approach her publicly he asked for the manager, and ushered into a sedate cubicle produced his official card.

"Miss Maud Bolles, of Turrets? Yes, inspector, she does keep a small drawing account with us."

"Small?"

"Well, one may infer for the purpose of meeting current expenses. And charities. The balance never mounts high, that is, for a person of her means. O, you wish to see the figures! You'll understand, inspector, it is not our custom to exhibit records of our clients——"

"I'm afraid I must insist sir. I may tell you at once I am investigating wilful murder."

The Cheltenham manager turned pale.

A moment later, looking up from certain bank sheets, Headcorn said, "It suggests, doesn't it, a second account at some other bank?" It undoubtedly did, was the answer. The manager added that Miss Bolles rarely visited Cheltenham, conducting her deposits almost exclusively by post. No, she had no strong box. Anything further the inspector wished to know?

"No, I think not. Well, yes, on second thought, you might just get together any canceled checks that may be available. I'll call back for them before you close."

Outside the staff entrance the woman bookkeeper was waiting.

"I knew it was me you really wanted," Alicia Harding whispered. "Scotland Yard, aren't you? About poor Aggie Trimble. Some one's told you she came to see me only a day or so before she was killed?"

In the mid-forties — efficient, small, like a bright eyed wren. In five minutes they were having their private talk in Miss Harding's sitting room. On the very day Miss Trimble got cold shouldered by the vicar she came straight here. A woman shamefully used, her one burning obsession the cleansing of her character from a hideous stain.

"For that was all she wanted, inspector. I know. What if that poor afflicted Erica had given her little things now and again? Aggie'd earned them, and more. Hadn't she foun' the younger Miss Bolles a crushed mouse, no will of her own, and built up courage and independence so that . . . O, you can't be telling me Erica is dead too?"

Horror dilated the bookkeeper's eyes. "O, dear!" Miss Harding gasped. "So it did happen after all. What did Aggie take away? I don't know except that it wasn't too big to slip in her bag. We—Enid and I—kept a few things for her, you see, and when Enid died and I moved into these tiny digs I brought the old trunk along. That's it, behind the screen."

The old trunk's interior was redolent of mothballs. Headcorn drew forth an ancient cleric's garb, a yellowed wedding gown, many jumbled keepsakes, and, from the bottom, some shabby army kit preserved from the last war.

"Her brother's, you say? Killed at Gallipoli. Quite so." A rusty bayonet; a carton of .45 shells. Little doubt that Miss Trimble's revolver had come from this collection. "Now, Miss Harding, what did Miss Trimble tell you? Whom did she accuse?"

The bookkeeper's eagerness faltered. "I—I think you know. But—Aggie's word against hers!"

"Let's have it all out on the carpet, Miss Harding. Agatha Trimble falsely charged with theft, believed she had found means of redress. What means? Or don't you know?"

Trembling, Alicia muttered, "Poor old Aggie was utterly distraught. Thursday afternoon she rushed over here again by train. She bombarded me with questions, and as she was going she gave me a note, in case anything went wrong with her—her plan. I've got it still. You see Enid was really responsible for this in a way. Enid had met Maud Bolles, O, almost 30 years ago, all by herself in a wee village in Italy. But please, please don't imagine my darling Enid put notions into Aggie's head! At least she didn't mean to. Besides what Aggie said was so unbelievable, so awful . . . and yet if it was true you can see well enough why Erica had to be dealt with one way or the other, and why Aggie, if she knew——"

In Wyfforde after a full day, Headcorn found Maj. Wadsworth not yet returned to his hotel but the maid, Hilda Lobb, home from her munition factory. Lastly he talked with the vicar of St. Peter's, mild, timid man, partisan in every line of his conscientious face. In fact he took pains to assure the inspector that in times like these, when donations were being cut down left and right, the joint contributions of the Misses Bolles had not dwindled by one penny. He made it the occasion for a little homily on the excellencies of Miss Maud.

"A truly great woman, inspector. Never a word of what, between ourselves, must have been an age-long martyrdom of endurance. Yes, a genuine Christian, whose name we all venerate and bless!"

Turning toward the house in the glen the inspector cuddled in his breast pocket a warrant for Maud Bolles' arrest.

"Dismiss your taxi," spoke a voice from a slowing car. "I'll drive you down."

"You, doctor? Actually I keep thinking about that boy."

The vision of young Grier, febrile, hot blooded, rose before his eyes. "Orphan, wasn't he? Rescued and educated by Miss Bolles."

"Among others. Presumably she's attached to him, it's impossible to know with that repressed type of woman. He sees, of course, where all the straws are pointing. One wonders if in a way he sprang that confession simply to gain time. Hoping against hope, you know, that different evidence may crop up to remove the danger. . . . What's that, a shot?"

Above the inky hedge to the left of the entrance of Turrets hovered a puff of gray smoke.

"Step on it," the Yard man roared, and the car leaped forward. Some of the smoke had drifted down and lay in a pall over the sick-faced youth who stood in the drive clutching his coat sleeve.

"Hurt?" Bruce tore at Robin's taut fingers. "Can you move your arm?"

Day before Christmas is a busy day for the woman who is having guests for dinner on the holiday. It's well to have a written plan for the holiday dinner, so that everything may be checked today and as many preliminaries as possible taken care of. Besides the menu, the written plan should cover table linens, china, silver, and glassware. The big turkey platter, used so seldom, may be in need of a good scrubbing. Perhaps the silver needs polishing; the tablecloth may need to be smoothed with a hot iron.

The centerpiece for the table should be ready, whether it is a simple arrangement of fruit and nuts or a more elaborate setup including pine boughs and candles.

In checking the menu, cooking and serving dishes should be considered, so that there'll be no last minute hitches of hunting a kettle big enough to cook all those potatoes, or climbing to a high shelf for a relish dish.

In some homes where the kitchen is used for breakfast, it will be possible to set the table for Christmas dinner tonight. There are a dozen tasks which may be performed this evening to make the food preparation quicker and easier tomorrow.

The turkey should be in complete readiness, with stuffing prepared and stored separately in the refrigerator. It is better not to stuff the turkey until Christmas morning unless both stuffing and turkey are cold when this is done. Stuffing is a good culture medium for bacteria if packed warm, or placed in a warm turkey.

If sweet potatoes are on the menu, they may be baked or steamed in their skins well ahead of time. Then they're ready for peeling, slicing, and heating in a candying sirup, or for mashing. White potatoes shouldn't be cooked early. Vegetables must wait until just before meal time for cooking, but they can be washed and ready. The salad may be prepared early if it's to be jellied or frozen. Salad greens should be washed and waiting, and dressing may be prepared.

Often the dessert improves on standing. A steamed pudding may already have been made, and lemon or hard sauce for it loses none of its flavor on standing overnight. Mince pie is almost the only one which is as good as fresh on the day after baking, but for many other kinds of pie, crust and filling may be prepared separately and stored overnight before combining. Any cream type filling must be refrigerated if prepared early.

A fruit juice or soup first course will wait nicely if stored in a covered jar in the refrigerator. A refrigerator dough for the fresh rolls will make the meal preliminaries easier, too. Sweet rolls may be baked today and reheated tomorrow. The packaged corn muffin mix and other packaged bread mixes might be remembered, for they're good products and great time savers for the cook.

A plentiful supply of coffee and of cream for it must be available, let the homemaker remember. It's lingering over that last cup of steaming, fragrant coffee that brings Christmas dinner to a pleasant, memorable conclusion.

HOPE FADES FOR CHINESE TRUCE BY CHRISTMAS

Government Suspicious of Communist Offer

CHUNGKING, China, Dec. 23 (AP)—The prospect of a truce between central government and Chinese communist forces by Christmas grew dim today. There was no development on a communist proposal, termed unofficial and informal by government spokesmen, for an immediate and unconditional cessation of hostilities.

[A Reuters dispatch from Chungking today said Gen. Marshall, after a courtesy call on Chinese Foreign Minister T. V. Soong, told newspapermen, "I don't see any point in reiterating the policy of the United States government toward China. President Truman has made that very clear."]

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, who returned to Chungking today from Nanking, conceivably could approve the truce proposal by Christmas, but so far as is known the Communists have not yet put the proposal in writing.

The communist proposal includes the "freezing" of contending troops at present positions. It would mean the government would have to halt movement of troops into Manchuria, where the Russians under present arrangements are supposed to withdraw by Jan. 3.

Government Is Suspicious

Central government quarters were patently suspicious of the communist proposal and the battle of claims and counter claims continued apace.

The Communists again asserted the central government was massing troops for a large-scale invasion of the Inner Mongolian province of Chahar. A central government dispatch declared Communists were attacking the Peiping-Mukden railway city of Lwanhsien. Another dispatch said government troops had recaptured Tsaoyang, highway town northwest of Hankow.

A communist dispatch charged government troops used poison gas against the Communists near Paoting, Hopei province, Nov. 27, killing one and affecting 40 others.

Gen. Chu Teh, the communist commander in chief, told the Associated Press in an interview at Yenan that he had withdrawn all his forces from Paotow, Kweisui and Tatung, Inner Mongolian cities under communist siege since mid-October. This he termed "an earnest gesture of the communist desire for peace."

Reds Confer With Marshall

Gen. Marshall, the new United States envoy to China, was expected to resume with Chiang tomorrow the conversations begun at Nanking.

Members of the communist delegation here for scheduled peace parleys conferred with Marshall today. It was understood they would invite him to visit Yenan, the communist capital, for discussions with their leader, Mao Tse-tung.

The conference, at which Marshall was said to have done more listening than talking, lasted an hour. The meeting was the first presentation of the communist viewpoint to Marshall. The trio who visited the new ambassador were Gen. Chou En-lai, deputy chief of the party and leader of the communist delegation to peace talks here; Gen. Yeh Chien-yi, chief of staff of the communist armies, and Tung Pi-wu, a communist member of the Chinese delegation to the San Francisco united nations conference.

CLAIM RED ARMY GUERRILLAS ARE ACTIVE IN SPAIN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Dec. 23—Bandits and Red army officers and men have seized a number of mountain towns in Spain and constitute a serious threat to the tottering Franco government, according to the London News Chronicle.

These guerrillas, serving under a core of communist soldiers, penetrated to as close as 40 miles from Madrid in the Guadarrama and Gredos mountains, a special dispatch to the paper said. The revolutionary forces are supplied by air with the latest armament, radio equipment, and supplies, which originate apparently beyond the Pyrenees, it was said.

Many contingents of the civil guard have been sent to fight the guerrillas, and it was said that it is impossible to fight the insurgents on equal terms because of their superiority in equipment and the rough terrain. In many villages, according to one civil guard, the entire police garrison has been chased off or killed, while village populations, thru fear or sympathy, side with the communists against Franco's men.

THE QUESTION

If Santa Claus could bring you personality traits and temperaments, what would you ask for first?

WHERE ASKED

Various locations.

THE ANSWERS

Joseph B. Craemer, chief clerk, 6119 Woodlawn av.—To be a success in life one ought to have a good disposition and a certain amount of equilibrium. You may spoil an apparent good disposition by losing your temper just once and might be called radical for getting off center. These two traits would be my first choice.

Helen Kelly, clerk, 7112 Cottage Grove av.—If Santa has some to spare I could use a little more ambition or, rather, that extra push to fulfill my ambitions. There are so many things I want to do, so many places I want to see, so many jobs I want to finish, but my ambition stops when it comes to actually doing things.

Julia Jacobs, clerk, 15130 Morgan st., Harvey—Consideration for the other person, rather than too much consideration for myself, would improve my personality, I'm sure. Especially when I'm tired I begin to lose patience with other people. That's what I want for Christmas—patience. I think with patience I could overcome anything.

Dave Baxter, station master, 7719 Cornell av.—I could use a little bit more of love for my fellow men. I'm sure many people are lacking in this quality. Another trait I'd like is to be more aggressive. I feel that I'd rather agree with people even when I know that I'm right. Maybe this isn't always the best policy.

Jeanette Jones, clerk, 15436 Myrtle av., Harvey—Gifts of this kind don't cost anything and yet would be priceless. They would be the kind of gifts I'd like to receive. First I'd ask Santa to give me generosity. I'm generous to a certain extent but I'd like to be able to give freely and not expect something in return.

Augie Nudo, clerk, 817 E. 89th pl.—I've always thought that I could use more poise and more self-assurance than I have. I'd like to know that I'm doing and saying the right things at the right time. I'd like to know that I could mix with any crowd and give the appearance of feeling at ease and interested.

REPORTS JAPS ON BOTH SIDES IN CHINA BATTLE

TOKYO, Dec. 24 [Monday] (AP)—Kyodo news agency today quoted a Japanese newspaperman repatriated from North China as saying that former Japanese soldiers, participating on both sides, were responsible for most of the fighting in a recent communist-government troops battle at Paotow, Inner Mongolia.

"Furious fighting developed in true Japanese style," Hisashi Aoyama, formerly on the staff of the Japanese Toa Shimpo, told Kyodo.

He said demobilized Japanese soldiers joined government troops in "utter despair." He said one Japanese sergeant who retained the same rank in the Chinese army was paid the equivalent of 25,000 yen [$1,667] monthly. Kyodo did not state how many Japanese had joined the communist army.

JAP GENERAL IN MANSION; CHIANG IN MODEST HOME

Nanking Commander Lives in Luxury

BY JOSEPH HEARST

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

NANKING, China, Dec. 23—While Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek was living in a modest two story house inside the walls of the Central Military academy here this week Gen. Juichi Okamura, Japanese commander, was living a few miles away in almost regal splendor.

Because he is useful to the central government thru the control he still exerts over surrendered Jap forces, Okamura is given every consideration. His headquarters are in a beautiful English style mansion surrounded by formal gardens. Inside finely furnished rooms there is warmth from a central heating plant such as is missing from most of Shanghai's best hotels.

Armed Jap sentries guard approaches to the house, and from it go orders from Okamura that keep thousands of armed Jap soldiers docile while they do guard duty.

Accelerate Disarming

The rate at which the Chinese are disarming the Japs has been accelerated in the last few weeks since considerable publicity had been given to the fact that thousands had been left with arms so they could aid Chinese troops to guard railroads and cities. So few had been disarmed that the repatriation program from Taku, port city for Tientsin, was virtually abandoned after 50,000 were sent home.

Generalissimo and Mme. Chiang left here today for Chungking after a week's absence from the war time capital during which they met Gen. Marshall, President Truman's special envoy. Yesterday their guest was Vice Adm. Daniel E. Barbey, commander of the 7th fleet, whom Chiang decorated with the "Grand Order of the Cloud and Banner," highest order China gives to foreigners.

There was no citation with the award, but presumably the generalissimo presented it because of the assistance Barbey gave the central government in transporting three Chinese armies from south China to north China and his recommendations since adopted that the United States give China some surplus amphibious craft and liberty ships.

Residents Stream Back

It is said the generalissimo would like to see the capital reëstablished in Peiping rather than Nanking, but does not believe this could be done. Arguments for Nanking include the facts that Sun Yat-sen, whose beautiful tomb is here, desired Nanking to be the seat of government, it is easily accessible to Shanghai, and it is well removed from the Chinese Communist area.

Nanking has the largest area of any Chinese city. The pre-war population was nearly a million but today, with old residents streaming back at a high rate, it is probably not more than half a million.

Finding good housing is difficult, as the American state department is discovering in seeking places for a force of about 70 persons due to move here from Chungking by the middle of March.

Food Is Plentiful

Most manufactured items are imported in Shanghai, and therefore higher in price, but in this agricultural area food is inexpensive. In December stands are piled high with large oranges, pears, and other fruit.

Skeleton crews of some ministries have set up shop here in preparation for closing their Chungking offices, probably in February.

The elaborate 24 room Nanking estate that the Japanese built for their late puppet president, Wang Ching-wei, is being prepared for Chiang Kai-shek, but the generalissimo and Mme. Chiang prefer a simple home, aides said.

CHINESE SLOWLY GAIN CONTROL OF MANCHURIA

PEIPING, China, Dec. 23 (AP)—The efforts of the Chinese government to gain possession of Manchuria progressed today as liaison troops moved toward four objectives. Other units were reported ready to fly to Changchun this week.

From Chinsien came word that the main railway line to Mukden, which had been blasted by Chinese Communists between Kowpangtze and Hsin Min, has been restored. Nationalists marching along the line have reached a rendezvous point at the village of Tsing Tsuei Tze, a Central news agency correspondent said. They will be met by liaison officers of the Russian army.

Details of the occupation of Mukden will be worked out in meetings between the Russians and Chinese at Hsin Min, 37 miles from Mukden.

Nanking Does Rushing Business in Brief Cases

NANKING, China, Dec. 23 (AP)—Nanking is briefcase crazy, now that diplomats are arriving and the government is moving back from Chungking, China's war time capital. Almost every store is displaying briefcases—all shades and sizes, with prices ranging from the equivalent of 10 to 30 United States dollars. Merchants expect to do a roaring business when government officials move here en masse.

SHINTOISM AND JAP STATE SPLIT CHRISTMAS DAY

TOKYO, Dec. 23 (AP)—Emperor Hirohito will make effective on Christmas day Gen. MacArthur's decree divorcing religion and government in Japan, the Kyodo news agency said today.

The imperial household's religious service ordinance will be drastically revised for the Dec. 25 anniversary of the death in 1926 of Emperor Yoshihito, father of the emperor.

He'll Pray Alone

In the future, the emperor will not be accompanied by members of the imperial family and government officials when he offers personal prayers or observes festival days within the palace. Members of imperial families and officials may attend such functions at will, however.

Grand festivals, held by the emperor to report important state matters to the imperial sanctuary, imperial ancestors' shrine and imperial mausoleum, will be discontinued, as will the dispatch of imperial messengers to government and national shrines.

Festivals Called Off

Festivals in the palace will be observed solely by the imperial household, while the three biggest festivals of historically famous Kamo shrine in Kyoto, Iwashimizu-Hachiman shrine in Kyoto, and Kasuga shrine in Nara, will not be held next year.

The anniversary of Emperor Yoshihito's death will be only a routine holiday for the general public, instead of an observance under Shinto as in the past.

India, Burma, and Ceylon Ask College War Training

COLOMBO, Ceylon, Dec. 23 [Reuters]—The interuniversity board of India, Burma and Ceylon, at its 21st annual session just ended here, demanded facilities for military training at universities in their respective countries. The board represented 15 universities.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY

Dec. 24—Treaty of Ghent is Signed

THE Treaty of Ghent, Belgium, signed Dec. 24, 1814, by representatives of the United States and Great Britain, was one of the most curious documents in diplomatic history. Neither nation obtained the things she wanted and for which she had fought. The desire to bring the War of 1812 to an end was stronger in both countries than the desire for specific benefits.

The United States had fought to end such British practices as that of interfering with American seaborne commerce and of stopping American ships and searching them for deserters from the British navy. Also, there was the intention in certain influential quarters of expelling Britain from Canada and putting an end to the Indian troubles which, it was believed, were constantly fomented by British agents.

Britain had hoped not only to vindicate what she had arrogantly come to think of as her rights on the seas but also to erect an Indian buffer state in the American northwest and to assume military control over the great lakes.

Far from granting either party any of these things, the Treaty of Ghent failed even to mention them [except the Indian matter, indirectly]. It provided for cessation of hostilities, mutual evacuation of conquered territories, reciprocal exchange of prisoners, the establishment by America and Britain of peace with the Indians and restitution of their rights and possessions, and the appointment of commissioners to settle certain American-Canadian boundary disputes which had arisen as a result of the ambiguous language of the treaty of 1783.

Britain later tacitly abandoned her claimed rights to interfere with American commerce and the personnel of American ships.

'Tis a merrier Christmas this year for thousands of children whose Dads are home from the war. We're glad with them. For them . . . and for all little children . . . we carry on our Christmas morning tradition.

TOMORROW MORNING...

You'll really hear the jingle bells that children dream of!

IN A COMMUNITY AS BIG AS THIS it will take Santa Claus a long time to fill all the stockings that are hung, for he'll try not to miss a single one.

And so, very late in the night, he'll be starting back north : : : with a jingle of bells : : : as Donder and Blitzen and the rest of the celebrated reindeer team go prancing away.

Children always hear those bells in their Christmas dreams. But, this year, they will really hear them. So will you : : : and quite clearly . . . if you get up early with the children. Or later, you'll hear them faintly in the distance.

Really and truly you'll hear jingle bells. They'll be on every Bowman steed : : : on all the many routes of Bowman.

Their merry music may recall other Christmases when Santa came down the chimney to fill your stocking. But what we intend them to do is to bring an extra thrill to youngsters all over town. Quite likely they'll do that.

You see, many little children have never heard jingle bells on Christmas morning . . . never really heard them!

ED McKEEVER, Cornell coach, admits the 1945 Army eleven was a great team, but he maintains the finest football machine he ever saw was the 1943 Notre Dame outfit. . . . Asked if he could name the starting line-up off hand, Ed obliged with first and last names, height, and weight. . . . The Irish of that autumn were a pretty fair squad at that, with John Yonaker and Jack Zilly at the ends; Ziggy Czarobski and Jim White at tackles; Pat Filley and John Perko at guards; Herb Coleman at center, and Angelo Bertelli, Creighton Miller, Jim Mello, and Julius Rykovich in the back field. . . . The aces on the University of Kentucky basketball team this winter are a pair of Jacks—Tingle and Parkinson—who led the quintet last season in scoring with 293 and 271 points, respectively. . . . Basketball is such popular sport at Kentucky that all tickets for the Wildcats' 11 home engagements were sold many weeks before the season began. . . . Mark Kelly, former Joliet and Chicago sports writer, who later gained fame in the same field in Los Angeles, was crusading for the idea of major league baseball on the Pacific coast 15 or 18 years ago. . . . Recently the scheme was boosted as a brand new inspiration of Clarence [Pants] Rowland, president of the Coast league, whose dream was tabled at the recent sessions of the big league moguls. . . . Packy Schwartz, White Sox trainer, and Sharkey Colledge, clubhouse boy, will go to Pasadena a week ahead of the advance party of players, to have their arnica bottles and curative lamps ready for the aches and sprains of a party which will break all records numerically.

President Larry MacPhail of the New York Yankees and his new press agent, Red Patterson, once came to blows when Larry was Dodger boss and Red was covering the doings of the Brooklyn club for the New York Herald-Tribune. . . . That Jeff Heath-George Case swap was made during the Columbus minor league meetings, where 74 news starved staff reporters would have been delighted to garner the item. . . . The news was suppressed thru the major league conventions in Chicago, then released in Washington and Cleveland. . . . The Employes Recreation association of the Eastman company in Rochester, N. Y., has broken ground for a $2,500,000 sports and general recreation building. . . . The University of Portland, Ore., will resume football next fall with Hal Moe, former Oregon State coach, in charge. . . . Games are being sought with Jimmy Phelan's St. Mary's Gaels, Santa Clara, and the University of San Francisco. . . . Wally Shocks, former auto race driver, is recovering at his home in Santa Rosa, Cal., from serious wounds suffered at Okinawa. . . . Stanley Krivik, drop kicking expert of the 1945 Notre Dame football team, made only one touchdown yet finished second in individual scoring for the squad. . . . He kicked 23 extra points after touchdown to finish with 29 points. . . . Elmer Angsman, the top man, had 42. . . . Eighteen players contributed to the team's point total. . . . Christmas Preview

We shall be losers if we swing not wide
The portals of the heart to Yuletide's glow,
And let the golden cheer of Christmastide
Illumine all the path in which we go.
For when we hear the strains of Holy Night,
And from a window shines a gleaming star;
When eager children listen with delight
To tales of wise men traveling from afar;
Upon our sight a curtain seems to rise,
And on this earthly stage we see mankind
In all his nobler roles. Before us lies
A kindly world to which we had been blind,
A preview of good will that we may know
Of which the angels sang so long ago.
—B. L. Bruce

White Christmas

That "Dream of a White Christmas" tune
I'm hearing wherever I go,
That poignant, haunting melody
Of the Yuletide and its snow;
On every side there is happiness,
Loved ones are coming home,
Tears of joy for each well loved boy,
Destined so long to roam.

We share in the joy of the families
Who no longer must worry or yearn,
But let's not for one moment lose thought of
The ones who will never return;
Christmas eve will not be white
On those tropic shores, we know,
Except for white crosses gleaming
In the winter moon's pale glow.

Yes, let us rejoice with the gladsome ones,
But never forget a prayer,
For each hero brave in his lonely grave
On Christmas eve "over there!"
—Jazbo of Old Dubuque

On This Night Before Christmas

On this night before Christmas, may all thru the world
Sound the trumpets of peace and no bullets be hurled.
May no bursting of bombs nor a shuddering fear
Say that strife might be lasting another long year.
May the misery of menacing missiles of war
Be forgotten and pale in the light of the star.

On this night before Christmas let's all be a friend
To the needy and lonely, and not just pretend.
And may this be the night before Christmas on earth
When resolve in our hearts shall accomplish new birth
In the minds of all men, that our striving may cease
And the world be refilled with the glory of peace.
—Nicholas Lloyd Ingraham

This Christmas

Silently the snow falls . . . covering, with impartial tenderness, the magnificent structures and the gaucheries of a manmade world . . . resting like a heavenly cloak on the graceful silhouettes of God's sculptures . . . nostalgically reminiscent of childhood and Christmas mornings long past . . . prophetically symbolizing, in its whiteness, the promise of peace . . . "peace on earth." —Morrison Doc's Wife

Holiday Picture

The streets are filled with people,
The stores are likewise, too,
And every one is busy
With countless tasks to do.
Salvation Army Santas
Are ringing bells once more
While standing on the corners
Collecting for the poor.
And many tiny faces
Are shining with delight
While pressed against store windows
To view the magic sight.
And homes are filled with whispers,
The gifts are hidden, too,
The family sharing secrets
And smiling . . . two by two.
So every one seems kinder
As Christmas time draws near—
Why can't this blessed spirit
Remain with us all year?

Christmas Eve, 1945

On Christmas eve: This holy night
In reverence we pray
With veneration at its height:
"Dear Lord, this hallowed day,
Bestow compassion on the world,
So overwhelmed with pain:
That love and peace will be unfurled
And blessedness may reign.
Reveal again the radiant star
With iridescent light,
Which shone in eastern skies afar,
To manifest your might,
So humankind will thus behold:
(As did the three wise men)
The promise of the story old,
In ancient Bethlehem."

WEBER TAKES TOURNEY TITLE AT ST. GEORGE

St. Pat Beaten in Final, 26 to 17

BY CHARLES BARTLETT

(Picture on next page)

Weber's Red Horde, a handy band of young men with a fine sense of basketball obstinacy, last night won the 12th annual St. George prep invitational tournament championship by defeating a willing but frustrated St. Patrick's team, 26 to 17, in the title battle in the St. George gym.

The contest was distinguished by nine consecutive minutes, including the entire second quarter, in which the ball did not move, Weber adopting a non-budging policy from the last minute of the first period until the end of the half.

Third Honors to Mount Carmel

The third place trophy was captured by Mount Carmel, three times winner of the championship, which defeated St. George, the host school, 36 to 31, in the evening's opener. The Dragons, trailing 18 to 6 at half time, rushed up within five points in the final minute, but their challenge was too tardy for the Caravan, which held margins of 6 to 4 at the first quarter, and 26 to 15 going into the final period.

Weber's triumph marked the 12th straight victory of the current basketball year for Coach Al McGuff's northwest siders and thwarted St. Patrick's attempt to capture its fourth St. George crown and second in succession.

All-Tourney Team Chosen

The all-tournament team chosen by attending authors consisted of Henry Wojtyla, Weber's captain, Dick Flando of St. Philip, and Ray McHugh of St. George, forwards; Ken Werba of St. Patrick, center, and Gene Dolan, St. Gregory, and Skip Gleeson of Mount Carmel, guards. Dick Zaleski, Weber's versatile football and basketball workman, was adjudged the most valuable player in the meet, and McHugh was given the sportsmanship trophy.

St. Patrick was the first to score, on John Lahey's free throw, but Weber was in front, 14 to 10, at the end of the first period. With one minute of the first quarter remaining, Richard Zaleski took the ball into the front court and there began directing the team in the stalling party which had the customers howling thruout the next nine minutes. There wasn't a speck of action in the second period, Zaleski and Bob Buczkiewicz clinging tightly to the ball while the other eight players stood around as tho they were waiting for a street car.

Concentrate on Defense

The third quarter produced a grand total of four points, all being credited to Weber. The Horde, with Zaleski, Harry Ubowski, and John Stachurski playing ring-around-the-rosy with the ball, was in full charge of the situation, the Shamrocks not laying a hand on the ball until late in the period, when Charles Wilson burst thru to detain a Zaleski pass, only to knock it out of bounds. Weber got its first basket on a shot by Stachurski after one minute and 30 seconds of the second half, then Henry Wojtyla clicked with a minute and 45 seconds of the quarter remaining.

Ubowski and Wojtyla ran it to 22 to 12 early in the fourth period, and therefrom St. Patrick, baffled by the Horde's clever front court passing, couldn't approach within closer than seven points. Weber was so intent on exercising complete possession of the ball that they declined six consecutive free throw attempts. Lineups:

RIVAL BLUE-GRAY SQUADS START SERIOUS WORK

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 23 (AP)—Rival squads buckled down to serious work today in preparation for Saturday's Blue-Gray football game.

While the southerners concentrated on running and passing drills, the Blues devoted much of their second day's workout to scrimmage from the T formation. Northern coaches say they are determined to win this year and break a five year Gray victory string.

OPEN MAROONS' TOURNEY TODAY

Tilden to Meet Harper in First Game

Altho Senn High school's Bulldogs, defending champions, and 30 other public high schools will have to wait until Wednesday to see action in the opening round of the 26th annual interscholastic basketball tournament sponsored by the University of Chicago, the tourney actually will be opened with one game today.

In this contest, the highly rated Tilden Tech senior team will meet Harper in a battle to determine which quintet gets the vacant spot on the 32 team bracket and meets Austin in the first contest on Wednesday's eight game program.

Tilden Off to Fast Start

The Tilden five, coached by Bill Postl, capped its practice sessions with a 51 to 44 triumph over Crane Tech Thursday and a 63 to 37 victory over Hyde Park Friday. Harper, which might score an upset, was soundly trounced Thursday by Gage Park, runner-up to Senn for last year's crown. Gage Park won, 79 to 34.

High scoring Ed Maracich, a guard who tallied 21 points in the Blue Devils' triumph over Hyde Park, is figured to cause trouble for the Harper five. On the other hand, Charles Sweet of Harper isn't coaching his charges to provide a pleasant afternoon for the opposition. Sweet has a rangy five, topped by 6 foot 5 inch John Meyer, and he may have been experimenting during the practice tests to determine exactly which combination would figure to create the most headaches for City league opponents.

Senn Meets Marshall

Backers of the Senn team, which followed its tournament triumph last year by going undefeated to capture the City league crown, will have to wait until 1 p. m. Thursday to see what steps the Bulldogs plan to take along the line of retaining their laurels. Senn meets Marshall in its first assignment, and altho Cap Leighton has been his usual silent self when questioned about the Bulldogs' chances this year, he does break into a smile in unguarded moments.

Reason for this occasional enthusiasm on Leighton's part is that Jack Wulf, 6 feet 5 inch center who was one of the key men in the 1944-'45 title drive, again is with Senn and counted upon to carry a heavy burden during the coming tourney and league campaigns.

Fisher, Martin Share Honors in Peirce Ice Skating Derby

BY JAMES SEGRETI

George Fisher and Johnny Martin, young, slender, speed minded ice skating stars and recent dischargees from the army air corps, yesterday completed successful missions in the Peirce playground's annual Derby, which opened Chicago's racing season on the Waveland rink in Lincoln park.

Fisher, 19 year old member of the Northwest Skating club, and Martin, former University of Illinois football player and the star of the Champaign-Urbana skating team, each scored 40 points in the senior men's division of the program. Martin won the 440 yard event, with Fisher finishing third in :37.2, but in the one mile race the order was reversed, Fisher gliding across the finish line ahead of Buddy Solem of the Catholic Youth organization and Martin in 3:14.4

Northwest Wins Team Title

Fisher's achievement helped the Northwest squad capture the team championship with 300 points. It was the first undisputed team trophy captured by the Northwest club in three seasons, the point standings being based on 30 points for first place, 20 for second, and 10 for third. The Glen Ellyn Athletic association squad took second place with 290 and the Catholic Youth organization, which has dominated ice meets in recent seasons, finished third with 220 points.

Dave Roll, leading member of the Glen Ellyn squad, broke the only record in the Peirce meet, first of 13 Derbies scheduled this winter in the Chicago area. The season will be climaxed by the 29th annual Silver Skates carnival sponsored by The Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., Jan. 19 and 20 in Garfield park. Roll won the 880 yard intermediate race in 1:20.8. The previous mark of 1:24.1 was set by Martin last year.

Peggy Barber Wins

Altho the Fisher-Martin duel in the men's events furnished interesting tests for the chilled spectators, Peggy Barber, Illinois state women's champion and member of the Barrett Athletic club, provided the most spectacular race of the afternoon as she defeated Loretta Du Mez of the C. Y. O. in the senior women's 880 yard event. The thrilling race followed Miss Barber's victory over Elaine Gordon in the 220 yard opener.

Miss Du Mez took the lead at the start of the 880 with Mrs. Gordon second and Miss Barber third. However, in the last 50 yards Miss Barber forged ahead to capture the event in the final strides. Miss Du Mez finishing second and Mrs. Gordon third.

Fall Eliminates Thomson

Martin experienced little difficulty in winning the men's 440. Marvin Thomson, also recently discharged after serving as an army pilot and three times Silver Skates champion, was a contender in the race until the last lap, when he fell. Bob Nutting moved ahead to finish second and Fisher placed third. Fisher's victory in the one mile was accomplished after he took the lead from Solem on the fifth lap.

BADGERS LOSE TO GREAT LAKES

Sailors Pull Away in 2d Half, 53-39

Great Lakes' basketball Bluejackets yesterday presented themselves with a yule gift in the form of a 58 to 39 victory over Wisconsin's Badgers in a rugged duel at the naval training center's Camp Lawrence. The victory, hard earned by a rally late in the first half, gave the Sailors a .500 rating for the eight games they've played this season.

Mel Riebe, the seaman who distinguished himself with the Cleveland professional team last year, had himself quite a time by scoring eight field goals and two free throws, altho scoring honors for the day went to Bob Cook of the Badgers, who hit eight times from the court and four from the penalty line.

Badgers Lead, Then Falter

Wisconsin took charge of the situation thruout most of the first half, assuming a 21 to 10 advantage at one time, but Bud Schaefer and Harry Grant joined with Riebe to gain a 26 to 23 margin at half time.

Schaefer began the second half with a basket, after which Riebe hit twice in a row, once from under the hoop and again from the side. John Pfeiffer and Riebe each connected again, and Tony Orlando scored from far out with only Exner Menzel interrupting the Sailors' attack, a drive which ran Great Lakes' advantage to 40 to 27.

Bluejackets Lead, 41 to 31

Bob Cook of the Badgers hit on a push effort and followed Bob Nicholi's free throw with one of his own. Pfeiffer then scored from the penalty line for the Bluejackets to make it 41 to 31. Wisconsin's Nicholi then scored and Grant of the Sailors was credited with a basket after a Badger had knocked the ball out of the hoop. Cook connected twice in a row to make it 37 to 45, but Dick Collier of Great Lakes then hooked in a basket to regain the 10 point margin.

Wisconsin, led by Cook, pulled up within nine points at 48 to 37, but Riebe took over, dropping in three baskets in succession. Lineups:

BY EDWARD BURNS

The Blackhawks, who have been featuring whirlwind finishes, last night were leading the Detroit Red Wings, 4 to 1, after four minutes of the final period before 19,055 worshipers in Chicago Stadium. Then the Wings stole their Garrison act, scored three goals for a 4 to 4 tie to knock the Hawks out of their first place tie with the Montreal Canadiens.

The tying goal was made by Ted Lindsay with less than five minutes of the match remaining. It was the result of one of the clumsiest efforts Goaler Mike Karakas ever made as a professional hockey player. Lindsay pitched the ball high to the middle of Mike's chest. Before the Hawk cage-minder had got thru fumbling, the puck had fallen into the nets, and the Hawks had fallen off the league's top rung before the second 19,000 crowd of the year, the third in professional hockey history.

Hat Trick for Doug Bentley

The fadeout took no glamor from the fact that Doug Bentley made three goals, the so-called hat trick, accomplishing all the Hawk total after Capt. Red Hamill had tallied in the first 35 seconds of the game.

Doug, tho still low scorer on the league's top string, composed of his brother Max, and Bill Mosienko, now has made a dozen goals. Last night Max had two assists and Mosienko three, thus setting their totals, as follows:

	Goals	Assists	Pts.
Max Bentley	19	13	32
Mosienko	11	19	30
Doug Bentley	13	12	25

The Hawks were leading 2 to 0 at the end of the first period, and saw the edge reduced to 2 to 1 on a goal by Murray Armstrong in the second period, after which Doug Bentley scored his second goal to make the count 3 to 1 at the end of that period.

Hawks Become a Bit Cocky

Doug scored his third goal for a 4 to 1 advantage; then, perhaps, the Blackhawks became a bit too cocky, for Fernand Gauthier, assisted by Syd Howe, scored in 6:56 of the third period after the Hawks had been afforded several chances to clear the puck from the end boards.

Bill Quackenbush was the second Red Wing to score in the overtaking process. Karakas and other Hawks claimed the puck had been kicked into the cage. Referee Chadwick didn't agree.

Foes Aren't Sympathetic

Then came the tying goal by Lindsay in 15:18 of the final period, Howe and Gauthier were given assists. They didn't seem very proud and certainly weren't sympathetic with Karakas in his ridiculous plight.

In the last three games between the Red Wings and Hawks over a span of nine nights Goalie Harry Lumley hasn't been very happy either. Ten days ago he had yielded only 27 goals. In the last three games the Hawks have socked 16 pucks past him. However, he's still leading the Vezina cup contenders with 43 goals by opponents. Hawk opponents have scored 77 goals.

BOSTON HOCKEY TEAM LOSES TO MONTREAL, 4-1

Canadiens Give Goalie Great Protection

Boston, Mass., Dec. 23 (AP)—The Montreal Canadiens sped thru the Boston Bruins for a 4 to 1 triumph in a National Hockey League game tonight before a packed 13,900 crowd in the Boston Garden.

The Flying Frenchmen gave Goalie Bill Durnan such airtight support that he did not stop a shot until after 19 minutes.

While going down to their second defeat in 11 home games, the Bruins were outplayed by a wide margin all the way and Durnan's hopes for his third shutout of the campaign were not dashed until about half way thru the final period. Then Bill Shill saved the Bruins from a whitewashing by rapping in Don Gallinger's passout to complete the game's scoring.

Elmer Lach scored the first Montreal goal in the first period, and the Canadiens put on a blistering second period attack for their last three counters, made by Murph Chamberlain, Maurice Richard, and Buddy O'Connor.

Golden Glover Makes Debut on Wednesday

Benny McCombs, Flint, Mich., light heavyweight, will be making his first Chicago appearance since winning the Chicagoland Golden Gloves middleweight title in 1942 when he meets Robert Satterfield in Ashland auditorium Wednesday night.

McCombs scored a first round technical knockout over Casey Williams of Kansas City, Mo., in the finals of the tournament of three years ago, an achievement which automatically placed him on the Chicago intercity team which lost to New York in Madison Square Garden, nine bouts to seven. Benny was beaten by Joe Carter, New York's 160 pound champion.

McCombs then disappeared from the scene until June 9 of last year when he knocked out Al Buzik of Buffalo in Flint. It was one of six victories he scored in that manner last year. He also registered three knockouts in his six engagements this year, the last of which was scored against Gene Simmons in Pittsburgh on May 15.

New Orleans Greets Sugar Bowl Elevens

New Orleans, La., Dec. 23 (AP)—St. Mary's and Oklahoma A. and M. football teams arrived today and headed for the Mississippi gulf coast to polish off training for their Sugar bowl game Jan. 1.

Both Coach Jim Phelan of St. Mary's and Jim Lookabaugh of A. and M. said their squads were in good physical shape, but need some workouts to make up for practice lost by inclement weather back home. They were not reassured by an all day rain here.

Gaels Watch Prep Game

Immediately after its arrival, two hours late, the Gael squad of 33 attended mass at the Church of the Immaculate Conception. Before going to the coast the players took a sightseeing trip thru the French quarter, watched a prep football game, and went to a party. Then they left for Edgewater Park, Miss.

The Oklahoma squad of 39, also late, left immediately for the training site aboard army air force buses from Keesler field at Biloxi, where they will hold their workouts.

Romance for Wedemeyer

A high school band, and members of the Sugar bowl committee, met each team. However, Herman Wedemeyer, star half back of St. Mary's, was more interested in one greeter, Seaman 1st Class Pat Herman of the WAVEs. Miss Herman said she had met Wedemeyer in San Francisco, and "he is the greatest football player in the world."

Renzel, Former Back at Marquette, Joins Cards

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 23 (AP)—Doug Renzel, Marquette university full back in 1939-'41, said today he had signed to play with the Chicago Cardinals of the National Football league in 1946. Joe Distasio, Cornell, alternated at left end with Skladany. Dick Fisher, Ohio State half back who was laid up with a cold, turned out for practice. Jack Breslin, Michigan State full back, and Jack White, Florida tackle, also filled in.

The westerners raced thru heavy programs with Co-Coaches Homer Norton, Texas A. & M. and Orin Hollingbery, ex-Washington State, forming numerous back field and line combinations in the experimental stage.

The West's coaches liked the hitting prowess of Lloyd Rude, Nevada full back, and the line play of Rod Giske, Washington State tackle. The western attack will be centered on Jake Leicht, University of Oregon ace who will quarter back the T-formation. Gay Adelt, speedy half back from Utah, and Earl Wheeler, rangy center from Arkansas, were impressive.

ART OF BUILDING CALLED BURDEN FOR ALDERMEN

Report Suggests Agency to Administer Code

BY LEWIS HUNT

When members of the city council subcommittee on building code revision get time to study the Chicago Association of Commerce's report recommending complete overhauling of the present code, they will find assertions that the art of building has become too technical for aldermen to regulate and that it is unfair to expect them to carry the burden.

The report was delivered to the city hall three weeks ago. The subcommittee, which includes Ald. Duffy [19th], chairman, Ald. Lindell [9th], and Ald. Cowhey [41st], held one brief meeting and decided to postpone consideration of the report until after the first of the year.

New Agency Proposed

Under the existing code, all changes in regulations are passed on by the full council. The report recommends that the council, as a legislative body, establish the basic objectives—"provision of safety to life and the protection of health"—and delegate to an administrative agency with technical ability "power adequately to interpret building regulation so as to obtain greater flexibility to meet changing conditions."

"In early colonial days, regulation was limited to the prevention of fire losses due to defective chimneys and to roofs," the report states. "Today there are some 13 major classifications under which building is regulated.

"Obviously, a legislative body [the council] is incapable of preparing the legislation in detail itself, and as building is becoming more and more complex and the considerations more technical, it is becoming less capable. Legislatures rightfully now must, and freely acknowledge that they must, request others to draft the building requirements."

Find Lack of Consistency

Chicago's code, "one of complete enumeration of methods and materials," is difficult for the council to administer because, the report states, "the degree of rigidity with which the regulations are written shows no consistency.

"This places complete responsibility upon the city council. Over half the municipal code of Chicago is concerned with building regulations. The aldermen, one from each ward, are a cross-section of the peoples of Chicago. Naturally, they are not selected for their technical skill or knowledge in the field of building regulation.

"Since its adoption in 1939, the building code has been continually before the city council for amendment. This burden in many of its aspects is unfairly, unwisely, and unnecessarily placed upon the council."

Called Behind the Times

Even tho the aldermen have given much attention to the code, the association's study found it behind the times. In some instances cited, the council functioned so slowly that technical progress was out of date by the time the council got around to approving it.

Furthermore, the report stated, the council has no means of learning what is going on among the agencies developing new standards of building.

"Such progress as is recognized by these agencies is denied to Chicago when there is failure to keep these standards up to date," the report added.

The association recommended specifically creation of a city building department, a board of building standards, and a board of appeals. They would be charged with seeking out new building methods and materials for the benefit of the people of Chicago as well as with relieving the council of the heavy, every day task of interpreting and enforcing the code.

STORY PROGRAM TELLS HOW LOOP BECAME A 'LADY'

Dramatize Change of Business Area

The transition of Chicago's loop from the era of shooting galleries and fun seeking establishments to a period combining dignified business establishments with the finest entertainment of the city was dramatized yesterday in a narrative, "The Loop," broadcast on the Chicago Story program over W-G-N at 9 p. m.

Beginning with the introduction of a British girl who is seeking a Chicago naval lieutenant she met in London, the story depicted the plight of a cab driver attempting to locate the Chicagoan at Christmas time in the loop. The driver, falling asleep as his customer searches in a loop club, dreams of the days when shooting galleries, lady barbers, mechanical pianos, and horse drawn cabs flourished in Chicago's bowery, or Barbary Coast, now known as the loop.

Tells Many Improvements

His dream transpired thru the period when Philetus W. Gates, Marvin B. Pool, Chauncey Keep and others founded the South State Street Improvement association and refused undesirable tenants further rentals. Ornamental street lights were installed along State st., the street was repaved for $136,000 and an extensive rebuilding program was mapped to begin the loop of today.

A trip to the lake front pointed out the skyline of great department stores, such as the one owned by an Illinois man who started a dress shop in Avon, Ill., in 1887. He ordered a carload of black, oil boiled taffeta and after dressing the women of Avon in black taffeta, had countless bolts of the material left. He moved to Chicago to find a larger market and became a mail order store when The Ladies Home Journal demanded the taffeta to fill dress pattern orders.

Merchant Aided Bank

Another State st. merchant, who established confidence in thousands of people during the depression by offering a leading Chicago bank several million dollars in Liberty bonds, also was recognized.

The cab driver is revived from his dream to discover that he has a picture of his rider in his billfold, acquired from the lieutenant when both were en route home from England, and proceeds to fulfill his passenger's original order.

The weekly half hour show was written and produced by Jack La Frandre with the musical arrangements by Robert Trendler. Next Sunday, the story will dramatize "The Planetarium."

Christmas Oats

L. C. Krueger of Anti-Cruelty society giving a pre-Christmas feast yesterday to one of Chicago's horses.

Five trucks, each loaded with 200 holiday dinners, will set out from the Anti-Cruelty society's shelter this morning, carrying Christmas cheer to horses with thin ribs wherever they may be found.

"For the most part the horses that can relish an extra meal are those of the alley peddlers," said Dr. W. A. Young, managing director of the society. "The dairy companies realize the need of good care. With each meal for the horse, we hand the owner a card informing him he will get better service if he feeds the horse properly, blankets it in cold weather, keeps it sharply shod and blows on a frosty bit before putting it in the horse's mouth."

Some 30 members and friends of the society worked two hours yesterday chopping apples and carrots and mixing grain.

NEWS OF FINANCE AND COMMERCE

OUTPUT OF G.E. LAGS; STRIKES A MAIN FACTOR

40 Per Cent Behind on Appliances

New York, Dec. 23 (AP)—Officials of General Electric company today reported production was running substantially below expectations, with strikes among parts suppliers a primary cause. One example offered of strikes in other companies which have affected G. E. operations was that of a supplier of tubs for washing machines which has been shut down about eight weeks.

H. L. Andrews, vice president in charge of appliance operations, said output in this division averaged roughly 40 per cent behind schedule.

Charles E. Wilson, president, termed current conditions and thinking "admittedly confused" and he added: "Maybe we expected too much in laying our reconversion plans."

Deny Holding Back Goods

"We thought we had plans ready to reconvert easily," he said, "and also to make vast improvements in plant facilities and layouts plus expanding some old lines and adding new lines and new plants. We have found it necessary to make a lot of changes in plans to overcome the time lag in getting out certain lines."

Speaking at a news conference, G. E. officials denied what they termed union charges that they were holding back goods to take advantage of lower tax rates in 1946 and would move plants out of "heavily unionized old work cities."

"It would cost a billion dollars to move into smaller towns," said Wilson. "Besides, they eventually all will be unionized. Anyway, labor is entitled to collective bargaining, and we happen to believe in it."

Little Allotted to Export

Andrews offered examples which he said proved appliances were shipped out as fast as they came off the production line. He said 97 percent of the flatirons and Washing machines made so far and 94 per cent of the refrigerators had left plants. He added that only 2½ to 5 per cent of those three items had gone to the export trade.

Touching on price controls, Wilson said "you reach the irreducible minimum somewhere" and asserted that substantial technological and engineering progress would be necessary before higher wage and material costs could be offset.

He said there was little likelihood that prices for products would decline in the near future.

NEW PAPER MILL BEING BUILT ON LAKE SUPERIOR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

QUEBEC, Dec. 23—A new kraft paper mill, which will ship its entire output to Wisconsin when operating, is under construction in the Lake Superior town of Marathon, it was reported here.

The mill is scheduled to start operating in June and at capacity will employ 350 men, apart from its woods operations. Daily production will be 350 tons, which will be shipped by rail and lake to the Marathon Paper Mills plant at Rothschild, Wis., for manufacture into paper for cartons, towels, and similar products.

A modern pulp town is being built around the mill, similar to the model city erected by the Ontario Paper company at Baie Comeau. A hotel and 11 bungalows already have been built with 191 more houses scheduled.

Larger Gift Stocks in '46 are Forecast

Christmas shoppers who have had difficulty this year obtaining quality toys, items of wearing apparel, or other gifts should find conditions much improved by next year, altho supplies for Christmas, 1946, may not be at pre-war levels, industry spokesmen said yesterday.

At the Merchandise Mart, headquarters for distributors of toys and clothes, a "far better" toy situation was predicted for next year. More and more metal toys will make their appearance to replace flimsy wooden and cardboard playthings.

Early Production Needed

Most large buying groups order Christmas toy supplies in March and April, so an early improvement in production will be necessary to be substantial by next Christmas.

In clothes, nylon stockings in fair supply have been promised within 90 days, and output is expected to be at record levels within a year. Manufacturers said labor difficulties and price ceilings are keeping down the manufacture of underwear, shirts, children's clothes, and other apparel items. Children's clothes supplies are expected to improve first.

Labor, Prices Uncertain

Manufacturers declined to predict the apparel supply next Christmas, because of the uncertainties in labor and prices.

Many said quality will be much improved over war time standards, when the need for substitutions is ended.

SANTE FE PREFERRED

I am interested in the provisions of Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe preferred stock. Is it callable?—P. P.

Santa Fe's preferred stock, of which 1,241,728 shares of $100 par are outstanding, is noncallable. It is entitled to preferential dividends each year "at such rate, not exceeding 5 per cent, as shall be declared by the board of directors . . . but only from undivided net profits."

Dividends are determined by the directors for years ended June 30, but for record purposes it is more convenient to consider the payments by calendar years. Since 1900 the $5 preferred rate has been paid yearly with these exceptions: 1933 $4, 1934 $5.80, and 1939 $3.50.

Since Pearl Harbor the Santa Fe's earnings have been largely in excess of preferred dividend needs, in contrast with rather narrow coverage during most of the 1930s and a profit of only $2.98 a preferred share in 1933. Substantial reductions in funded debt and fixed charges since 1940 have improved the statistical position of the stock.

WEATHER CURBS STEEL OUTPUT IN MANY DISTRICTS

Cleveland, O., Dec. 23 (AP)—Both steel production and transportation have been affected by adverse weather conditions and the influence of the holiday season, the trade publication Steel reported today.

In the Buffalo area production has been brought almost to a halt and at other producing centers there was a threat of curtailment because of difficulty in transporting raw materials, Steel said.

In addition to the threatened general steel strike set for Jan 14, domestic consumers will be restricted by "substantial export directives, affecting some of the most critical products," Steel said. "Approximately 850,000 tons will be involved in these directives, with substantially more than a third composed of sheets, strip and tin plate, the latter being the largest single item."

Smith College Class to Form Corporation

Northampton, Mass., Dec. 23 [Special]—A class in advanced economics at Smith college, conducted by Stanley C. Ross, visiting lecturer, plans to form the Ecclyco, or Economics Class corporation, with 18 juniors and seniors of the class as members.

There is no compulsion to join, but all have the course which inspired their move: "Corporations: Their organization, accounting, financial policies, and public control." It has been a part of the curriculum for several years.

The first steps to incorporate under the laws of Massachusetts were taken with President Herbert Davis' consent. Articles of incorporation and by-laws were drawn up by the class.

Provisional Board Set Up

Five were listed as incorporators, including four seniors, Agnes Broadfoot of Jewett City, Conn., chairman of the board; Evelyn Allntuck of West Newton, Mass., clerk; Henrietta Hammonds of Hamden, Conn., and Edna M. Forbes of Larchmont. The fifth member of the provisional board, all of whose members are above 21 years old as the law demands, is a teaching fellow in economics, Ruth Weiss, who was graduated from Smith last May.

Ecclyco will authorize an issue of 200 shares of $5 par stock and one of 2,000 shares at a dollar each with no par value. The class hopes to retain control altho the stock is to be sold to other students.

With the money received from the stock sales, the students will trade in securities of business corporations, mostly thru the New York Stock exchange. One leading brokerage house was reported to have offered its services as adviser and will be a host to stockholders of Ecclyco when they visit Wall street.

Observe State Laws

Any dividends will be distributed in accordance with Ecclyco by-laws and the laws of Massachusetts. Details of the corporate organization will be supervised by Ross and the corporation's legal adviser.

Ross, formerly a regional police executive for the office of price administration, said the Ecclyco corporation will give students an opportunity for corporate accounting practice and applied study of corporate laws, as well as an understanding of the basic details of corporate organization.

Students already display in the classroom "a keen awareness of the business involved and the pitfalls to be avoided in managing corporations," he said.

CHAIN BELT CO. EARNINGS GAIN IN FISCAL YEAR

Sales Volume Dips to 28 Million

Chain Belt company net earnings in the fiscal year ended Oct. 31 were slightly higher than a year earlier tho sales slipped below the record set in 1944, J. C. Merwin, president, said yesterday in his annual report to stockholders. Net income was $854,081, or $1.75 a share, against $828,968, or $1.70 a share, a year earlier. Sales declined to $28,197,939 from $30,112,521.

War products accounted for a smaller portion of the Milwaukee manufacturer's total volume. Sales of regular products exceeded those of any pre-war year, Merwin said. In ratio to net sales, earnings increased from 2.8 per cent in 1944 to 3 per cent in 1945, the improvement reflecting a larger proportion of peace time business.

Export Orders Set Record

Merwin reported that export orders during the year exceeded those of any previous year "by a considerable margin."

Reviewing financial results of war operations, Merwin said net earnings averaged $864,821 a year during the four war years, compared with $912,666 in the pre-war years 1938 thru 1941. Reduced war time profits were attributed principally to governmental policies. Tho the company's operating income for the war years exceeded pre-war levels by large margins, profits were materially reduced by renegotiation and war time taxes.

Optimistic Over Future

Merwin expressed optimism of the future because of heavy demand for the company's products, which in addition to chain belt and transmission equipment include construction machinery and sanitation equipment.

"There is a pronounced shortage of most of the products we make and such things as the scarcity of housing, the necessity for reconversion on the part of many industrial plants, the growing need for sewage and water treatment in the sanitation field, and the proposed highway and flood control projects all call for use of the kind of equipment we produce," he said.
